INCOME TAX VOTE IS CLOSE

DOUBTFUL ON INCOME TAX.
President A. T. Treadway
Senator Joseph S. Gates
Senator McIvin S. Nash.

A poll of the Massachusetts Senate which was expected to take up the income tax constitutional amendment late today, shows that a majority has not declared against the measure.

Eighteen Senators came out squarely in favor of the measure and three were non-committal. If they vote together the amendment will go through. There were nineteen who indicated their intention of voting against the measure.

The three men who would not express their intentions are Presiding Treadway, Joseph S. Gates of Worcester and Melvin S. Nash of Plymouth. They are Republicans.

Those who voted in the AMERICAN'S poll for the measure were:

Senators Martin F. F. Curley, Boston; James H. Doyle, Boston; Edward J. Grainger, Boston; Dennis B. Halley, Essex; James A. Hatton, Boston; Joseph H. Huber, Middlesex; Roger Sherman Hoar, Middlesex; John H. Hurd, Worcester; Joseph F. Lomasney, Boston; John H. Mack, Berkshire; Joseph F. Malley, Hampden; Michael J. Murray, Boston; Arthur L. Nason, Essex; George H. Newhall, Essex; James F. Powers, Boston; Francis X. Quigley, Hampden; Samuel Rose, Bristol; James P. Thiffty, Boston. Total, 18.

Of this number 14 are Democrats and four Republicans. The Republicans voting for the measure are Senators Hibbard, Nason, Newhall and Rose.

Those who declared themselves as opposed to the income tax amendment are:

Senators Arthur S. Adams, Essex; George L. Barnes, Norfolk; Frank P. Bennett, Middlesex; Curtis V. Hunt-Lord, Middlesex; Charles H. Brown, Middlesex; Charles S. Chase, Bristol; Daniel E. Denney, Worcester; Wilmot R. Evans, Jr., Middlesex; Levi H. Greenwood, Worcester; Roland M. Keith, Plymouth; Walter B. Mellen, Worcester and Hampden; Henry C. Mulligan, Middlesex; Charles H. Pearson, Norfolk; John H. Schoonmaker, Franklin and Hampden; Harry N. Stearns, Middlesex; George H. Thibaut, Boston; James E. Tolman, Essex; Joseph Turner, Bristol; John E. White, Cape Cod. Total, 19. They are all Republicans.

Total number of Senators, 40.
Necessary to win if all vote, 21.

FREDERICK E. LONG DIES IN DORCHESTER

Frederick E. Long, vice-president of the Handel and Haydn Society, is dead at his home, No. 295 Neponset avenue, Dorchester, aged seventy-two. Besides being prominent in musical circles for thirty years, he was known to many as a baseball enthusiast in the game, having been treasurer of the Boston team in the late seventies, and also treasurer of the Boston team in the old Brotherhood League in 1890. Mr. Long retired from active business a year ago. He suffered a shock last Friday.

STATE INVITES GRAND TRUNK TO ENTER BOSTON

The Senate adopted the Grand Trunk resolution unanimously this afternoon.

The House of Representatives, by a unanimous voice vote, to-day adopted an order inviting the Grand Trunk Railroad to extend its lines to Boston. The order was offered and the argument for its passage led by Representative John F. Meaney of Blackstone. This is the order:

WHEREAS, the entry of the Grand Trunk Railroad system to the Port of Boston would be greatly to the commercial advantage of Massachusetts; therefore be it

ORDERED, that we, the Massachusetts House of Representatives, do hereby join in inviting the Grand Trunk Railroad to extend its lines to Boston, and that copies of this order be forwarded to the directors of the Grand Trunk Railroad.

There was a brief and spirited debate as to whether or not the order should be referred to a legislative committee before being adopted, but the House voted down this proposition by a voice vote that was almost unanimous.

"Want It Without Delay."

Washburn of Worcester, Saltonstall of Beverly and Wolcott of Milton urged reference to a committee. Practically every one of the other House leaders opposed the reference on the ground that such a proceeding would be a waste of time.

"The thing we want," said Representative Meaney in opposing the committee reference, "is to get the Grand Trunk started for Boston. The people want it without delay. We ought to adopt this order at once."

The Meaney order was the first business before the House when it convened at 11 o'clock to-day. Mr. Meaney, in formally presenting the order to the House, said:

"The business interests of Boston and the people of Boston are united in a desire to have the Grand Trunk come to Boston."

He quoted from a speech delivered in Congress last Monday by Joseph G. Cannon, showing the extent of the Grand Trunk system and its value as a matter of business to any port it may enter.

Washburn Favors Reference.

Washburn of Worcester opposed immediate adoption of the order on the ground that the order might mean more if it were allowed deliberative discussion before a legislative committee. He urged that it be referred to the Committee on Railroads and Metropolitan Affairs, sitting jointly, which now have many measures before them, providing for the development of commerce in the port of Boston.

Cushing of the Back Bay urged the adoption of the order "as a means to assist in the very much desired development of Boston Harbor."

"The Grand Trunk," he said, "is capable of bringing more business to our port than any other railroad which might enter here."

He opposed reference to the committee of which he is chairman as a waste of valuable time. Representative Meaney again took the floor to say:

"The question here is not the sort of a proposition which the Grand Trunk might make, when it seeks to enter Boston, in response to our invitation. That question will be taken care of when it regularly comes before us. What we want to do is to accept the port of Boston. And it is the fact this order the news will be flashed from the State House that we don't want the harbor of Boston developed. This order is of great importance for developing the port of Boston."

"No Time Should Be Lost."

Greenwood of Everett said that no time should be lost in inviting the Grand Trunk to come to Boston, and that its coming is much needed and much desired. Cogswell of Lynn also urged adoption at once. Spiller Constall of Beverly declared that the House should have the matter considered by a committee, so that hasty action might not be regretted later. Montague of Boston also favored a committee reference. Cushing of Boston again urged the House not to refer the matter to a committee and to act on it at once.

Meaney of Blackstone delivered a few final smashes at the Washburn motion to refer to a committee, and the House, in by a voice vote that was almost unanimous defeated the committee reference. Then by a wild chorus of "yeas" and not a single "nay" the House adopted the order.

Further details of the AMERICAN'S campaign to bring the Grand Trunk to Boston are printed on Page 8.

BOSTON GREETS BIG CUNARDER

Typifying the new birth of Boston as a world port, the big new Cunarder Franconia steamed proudly up the harbor from quarantine early to-day, arriving into her dock at East Boston shortly after 7 o'clock. Her progress up the harbor was a triumphal one. Bluejackets and soldiers, cheers and flags greeted the biggest liner that ever docked in this city, and the 2,328 passengers on her maiden trip wondered at the cordiality of their reception.

When the big liner was warped up to the Cunard pier the pier doors, gaped for the gangways of the Saxonia, Ivernia and Pannonia of that smaller length, did not fit the gangways of the giant Franconia at all points. The second cabin gangway could not be used. Second cabin passengers made their exit to shore by the first cabin route. The baggage gangway also was out of line and the baggage was "toted" ashore by hand instead of being hauled over the ship's side by winch and whip. Before the Franconia came here again this matter will be remedied at the pier.

Captain is Elated.

Commander C. A. Smith, R. D., R. N. R., captain of the Franconia, has not been in Boston since he ran into this port as commander of the Scythia seventeen years ago. He is delighted with his new command, especially for her steadiness.

Passengers expressed the same praise. During the heaviest seas the passengers played the usual deck games on the way over, but as though the big boat was gliding through an ocean of glass.

The Francouia brought in the largest number of English speaking steerage and the largest number of Irish immigrants ever housed here. There were 780 Irish immigrants in the steerage and 62 in the second cabin. Thirty-four Scotch immigrants were in the second cabin and thirty in the steerage.

Sister Ship Coming.

This evening the importance of the new departure of the Cunard Steamship Company in assigning two of their newest and largest boats to this city will be formally recognized by a banquet on board the Francouia which will be attended by Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, officials of the Chamber of Commerce and by men prominent in Boston's commercial and business interests.

In less than a year the Francouia will be joined in the Boston-Liverpool service by her sister ship, the Latonia, now building. Both are practically ships of the Mauretania and Lusitania type, although slightly smaller, but fully up to them in equipment and speed.

The second home game of the schedule by Harvard on Soldiers Field came this afternoon against the fast University of Maine nine. The boys from Orono came to Cambridge with a good early season record behind them and took fifty to make Harvard run hustle for anything they got.

A decided change had been made in the lineup of the Crimson nine since the game against Tufts last Tuesday. At first McLaughlin was shifted to left field from first base, which he held in the opening game, and Hann got the job, which he covered all last year. He started the season at third, but apparently Coach Sexton was not satisfied with the balance of the team, for Devlin was rapidly playing for McLaughlin has put up a stellar game at all the positions he has played in this season, and his ability to fight it he held on that he can at any time be shifted to first, second, short or the batting staff, which is rather weak at Harvard this year.

GIRL YOUNG TAFT WOOED IS ENGAGED

CHICAGO, April 27.—Evanston society is discussing the engagement of Miss Irving Gardner, daughter of William Gardner, vice-president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, to J. Laurence Onderdonk of Evanston. That she is to marry an Evanston man has aroused interest, though not surprise because Robert Taft, son of President Taft, was such an ardent suitor of Miss Gardner last Fall that their engagement was rumored.

FOR THIS WOMAN'S AFFECTIONS SODEN IS ASSESSED $10,000

SODEN VERDICT IS FOR $10,000

Ten thousand dollars damages must be paid by Arthur H. Soden, the former base ball magnate, to Frederick Small of Brookline for alienation of the affections of Mrs. Small, according to the verdict rendered to-day by Robert O. Harris, former judge and present Congressman, in the suit for $50,000 brought against the defendant.

Judge Harris makes this decision today as auditor in the suit. He was appointed to act as such by Judge Brown. In his report on the Soden case, when he awards $10,000 damages to Small, Judge Harris says:

"The whole evidence is strongly suggestive of collusion between the plaintiff and his wife, and even of connivance on his part but after a careful consideration, it seems to me to fail short of proof of these things, and to leave them within the realm of suspicion.

An Indifferent Husband.

"My conclusions are that the plaintiff and his wife were living in amicable relations at the time the defendant became acquainted with her. That the defendant did not act towards her in a manner that was a clear violation of the plaintiff's marital rights. That Mrs. Small was, how ever, of a character that on great persuasion or inducement was needed to lead her astray, and that she was a ready and willing party to her own dishonor, and that her own conduct was a inducement to the defendant to pursue the course toward her that he did.

"That the plaintiff was not a convicting party to her misconduct, but that he was an indifferent husband, who, after h knew that she was going wrong was willing that she should, and ready to take advantage of any error she might make, either by way of obtaining a divorce or of making a profit. The plaintiff is entitled to damages for the invasion of his right, and the injury to his affections, and the shame upon him

"As the character as a husband and his attitude toward his wife bear upon the question of his damages, I find as a fact that although of the time of the defendant's invasion on his household he was living with his wife in an amicable manner, he was nevertheless so indifferent to her as to be careless about her, was not so attached to her as to be protective of her or of her interests or honor.

"I cannot find that he is entitled to receive the damages that an affectionate, tender and considerate husband to whom the slaying of his wife from the path of virtue would be almost a death blow, should receive, as I do not find that his suffering or his feeling of shame is as great as that of such a husband.

"He is, nevertheless, entitled to substantial damages, and I therefore find for the plaintiff in the sum of $10,000."

COMMENCEMENT PLANS AT HARVARD

Afternoon exercises of Harvard graduates on Commencement Day will be held in the open air on the Delta, if the weather is pleasant, in the quadrangle back of Sever Hall instead of in Memorial Hall. The decision of the Alumni Advocate have decided upon the change. It is held that the exercises will be more impressive if conducted in the open air than if held in a hall. In estimating the quadrangle seats will accommodate 7,000 persons, several months ago Judge Edward D. Lowell advocated shifting the exercises from the hall to the Stadium.

SAYS MRS. GLOVER THRASHED HUSBAND IN LE BLANC FIGHT

Witnesses Swear Widow Coerced Laundryman and Even Discussed Shooting

Evidence was introduced to-day at the Glover will trial in the Superior Court at East Cambridge to show that Mrs. Lillian M. Glover gave her husband, Clarence F. Glover, an awful thrashing about eight months before he was murdered, after she caught him lavishing his affection on Hattie Le Blanc.

"BEAT HIM TILL HE BEGGED FOR MERCY."

According to Harold Gardner's testimony, Mrs. Glover told him she got Clarence down. She beat him. He begged for mercy on his knees. And the next day Clarence had a black eye and a cut cheek.

"My wife did it," Gardner said Clarence told him.

This testimony was brought out by the contestants of the will, who contend that Mrs. Glover plotted to trap her husband and Hattie Le Blanc together so that she would have a club over the head and be able to force him to make such a will as she desired.

Gardner testified further that Mrs Glover asked him if a woman would be justified in shooting her husband under the circumstances and the young man told her she wouldn't.

"I know that's true," Gardner swore she replied, "because I got it on good authority."

This testimony was followed by startling evidence given by William and Arthur Glover, brothers of Clarence. William testified that Clarence said to him:

"My home is a perfect hell. I don't have a minute's peace. That woman is after me continually. It is enough to drive a man crazy."

Afraid of Being Shot.

Arthur Glover swore that Clarence said to him:

"I'd like to do better by you boys, but I'm so afraid she will shoot me. My wife has raised so much hell with me that I can not do as I like. Sometimes she is a regular devil."

Mr. Barry said that he expected to prove through Hattie Le Blanc, who was tried and acquitted on the charge of killing murdered Glover, that previous to the making of the will in April, 1909, Mrs Glover and her husband had a fight and she said:

"You put Seymour in the will."

"There were threats to kill," said Mr Barry. "When Glover signed the will he did it because he was forced by a woman who was called his wife.

Short Speech by Ranney.

Fletcher D. Ranney, representing the four Glover brothers who are contesting the will, took up only about twenty minutes of the time of the court in presenting his reasons why the will should stand.

Mr Ranney brought the name of Hattie Le Blanc into the case and declared that Mrs. Glover caught her husband making love to the girl. It was their contention, he said, that the making of the will and the murder of Glover were two different things.

Then Mr Ranney called the witnesses to the Glover will—Alton F. Tupper, a lawyer; District Attorney John J. Higgins, and Mrs. Belle D. Elmore, the wife of Lawyer Samuel D. Elmore, executor of the Glover estate. Each of the witnesses swore that Glover was in his right mind when he made the will.

Harold Gardner was called as the first witness for the opponents of the will. He was questioned by Mr. Gove. He said that he lived in Waltham and was in the laundry business

SLAYER ABBOTT GIVEN A PARDON

Stearns Knight Abbott, who has been serving a life sentence for murder in the state Prison at Charlestown, was to-day released by Governor Foss. The pardon was issued by the Governor and Council and approved by the Executive Council, and handed by the Governor to Edward P. Mc Gaffery and Dr. Thomas Leen and they took it to the prison, where the aged man was freed. He is seventy years old and has been in prison thirty years.

Petitions for a pardon for Abbott have been presented many times, but have always been refused by Governor Foss's predecessors. The case is a celebrated one in Massachusetts.

Abbott was convicted on April 22, 1881, of killing Mrs. Marta Crowe, an aged woman who lived alone in Groton, and sentenced to be hanged. The sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment by Governor Long after he had been appealed to for clemency by the late Wendell Phillips and others who had interested themselves in Abbott's case.

Abbott has contended that his conviction was due to the fact that he had completed a six years' sentence in the State Prison and had been seen hanging around Groton in the vicinity of Mrs. Crowe's house shortly before she was murdered. He maintains his innocence. He says he is suffering for another man's wrong and is a victim of his prison record.

John A. Abbott, Jr., of Pennsylvania, a brother, in a letter to Governor Foss says that he will give his brother a home and see to it that he gets employment.

WEST ROXBURY IS AFTER A PARKWAY

West Roxbury citizens visited the Mayor's office to-day to urge that the city construct and maintain a parkway in the West Roxbury district. The original taking for a parkway in this district was made many years ago but the work has never been completed. The proposed parkway includes the Arnold Arboretum and extend by irregular boundaries to the Dedham line, including Bellevue Hill and would connect the city and the Metropolitan Park system. Since 1894 this work has been under the jurisdiction of the park commissioner's office, but no plans have been made by the commissioners. The Mayor stated that he was in favor of the project, but that there was doubt as to whether the city could legally take land for the purpose for the improvement. He will give a decision later.

INSPECTOR DUGAN'S 47TH ANNIVERSARY

Chief Inspector Joseph Dugan received congratulations from his brother officers to-day, for it is the forty-seventh anniversary of his appointment as a member of the police force. Inspector Dugan, at the sixty-six years old, is vigorous and active, looks and acts like a man of forty, and is the oldest member in point of service on the force. He has been in twenty-seven years at headquarters. He was appointed as inspector, captain in 1865 and chief inspector last year. He is a native of Rockland, Me., having served in the army and navy. He was with Farragut at Mobile Bay.

LOWELL DISCOVERS $120,000 BAD DEBTS

LOWELL, April 27.—Lowell is out $120,000. This was indicated by Edwin L. Moore, expert accountant, who to-day submitted his report after an examination of the city treasurer and auditor's accounts. He says that $120,000 charged on the books as assets were uncollectable taxes and that this sum might just as well be wiped off the books.

GERMAN-AMERICAN POTASH AGREEMENT

BERLIN, April 27.—An agreement to form an independent potash syndicate in United States and the German syndicate is reported from Frankfort to have been signed by the principal German potash concerns will negotiate directly with the German syndicate for the marketing of combined output. The negotiations will be opened May 10.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, April 27.—The Red Sox were out to make it three straight over the New York Yanks this afternoon and incidentally to put a second place, which position they attained by virtue of yesterday's victory.

Manager Donovan found that it was Eddie Karger's day to pitch and said the veteran left-hander would do the work if he felt fit. The alternate was Ray Collins, the other southpaw on the staff. Manager Chase favored Ray Caldwell, his tall, young right-hander, and held Russell Ford in reserve.

The afternoon was actually hot and a big crowd of fans took advantage of the ideal conditions to get a look at the opening game. They were glad they came for another triumph and gave the Donovanites plenty of encouragement before starting the game.

The players were out unusually early, resolved to take full advantage of the warm sunshine. Even the cripples felt better and capered around the yard in close imitation of their able-bodied brethren.

Before the battle the Sox had a reserved of four minutes out of the five home games. Five out of six was the target at which they were aiming.

WILLIAM T. COOK DEAD.

POXBORO, April 27.—William T. Cook, a well known business man of Boston, died here to-day of acute indigestion at the age of eighty-eight. For many years he carried on a commission business on Pearl street, Boston and then went into the straw goods industry of this town.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PARK, New York, April 27.—George Tyler and Buster Brown were warmed up by Manager Fred Tenney before to-day's game between the Boston Rustlers and the New York Giants. The Boston leader favored his young New England League southpaw, but Brown was considered a possibility because so many left-handers already had failed to down the Giants.

Red Ames and Louis Drucke were Mc Graw's candidates. Both of them had been going at top speed and both could be depended on to give the Boston bunch a scrap.

The Giants' record on these grounds was still clean previous to this afternoon's skirmish. Not one defeat had been charged against them since they invaded President Farrell's preserves.

The Boston players were smarting under two consecutive defeats and they were more than anxious to take the measure of McGraw's team. They showed no loss of ginger, despite their reverses, but were just as full of fight as when they started out on the field in the opening game of the series.

MAN IS ARRESTED FOR SALOON BREAK

Edward Quirk, fifty-six years old, who has no home, was arrested early to-day, charged with breaking into the liquor store of Edward H. Sullivan, No. 28 Portland street, and stealing two quarts of whiskey. The police say Quirk picked through a plate glass window.

SAYS WIDOW THRASHED GLOVER

WILL CASE WITNESS TELLS OF PUNISHMENT TO LAUNDRYMAN.

Glover and that in her opinion Glover was of sound mind at the time.

Excused From Cross-Examination.

None of these witnesses was cross-examined. Mr. Ranney then offered the will in evidence. It was read to the jury and admitted. Mr. Ranney then announced that he rested his case.

Edward P. Barry began the opening for the contestants at 9:50 o'clock. Mr. Barry said:

"We say that Mrs. Glover would be better off under the will than otherwise in spite of the contention of my brother. We will show that the income from the $10,000 dry has been equal to $1,000 a month or $12,000 a year.

"We will show you by the evidence that Mrs. Glover had Seymour Glover's name put into that testament, that she formed Mr. Glover by intrigue, blickering and threats to put the name of Seymour Glover into the testament. We will show you that Clarence F. Glover did not put into the will the clause that in case of the death of Seymour Glover the money should go to the kin of Seymour. We will show you that the money should not go to you stranger.

"We will admit Mrs. Glover is of French descent, but because Mrs. Glover is of French descent we will not agree with our brother that she is terse, coarse and almost unruffled. We will show to you by evidence whether or not she is the sort of woman who can bend a rod of steel. We will show you she is a profligate, a charlatan and a creature by heart temperamentally opposite, she is but that sort of creature to bend a man with a will of iron. There are many men who side before a woman and she is just that sort of a woman.

Mrs. Glover Is Accused.

"Mr. Ranney said there were quarrels in the house. Yes, gentlemen, there were quarrels in the house. There were fights, vicious fights, and the end was a vicious fight. There were threats to kill. We intend to ask you what was the mind of the man who wrote such threats had been made. We intend to show you that the widow knew there was a will. We intend to show you that prior to the execution of the will that there was a grand fight and she said to Glover, 'You put Seymour in the will.'

"This is according to the little French girl who overheard the conversation.

Mr. Ranney objected to this last statement and Judge Hammond said: 'The testimony would be in trying to prove and I see no reason to caution him at this point.'

Mr. Ranney still objected and Mr. Barry said that he would withdraw the statement, as he did not wish any exception. Judge Hammond said: "Counsel should be careful in their statements and not make statements which they wish to withdraw." Mr. Barry continued:

"We expect to prove that Mrs. Glover said that the reason she wanted Seymour in the will was that she could do what she wished for because Seymour was a poor, innocent creature. It may have been a satisfaction on her part. We ask you to believe what she said about Seymour was true and taken with his aid her income might be greater.

Glover Brothers to Testify.

"We will present to you the brothers of Clarence Glover, who will tell you their honest, homely story in their own way. They will tell you there was no estrangement between them and Clarence. They will tell you that they met Clarence frequently. They will tell you why they never received the letters Clarence wrote you.

"Whenever he talked of his brothers it was of love and affection for them and just the adverse of his wife. We will show what happened in late March, three weeks prior to the making of the will.

"We will show you one person in the employ of Mr. Glover was called in and who would have placed Mr. Glover in a compromising position. If convicted Mr. Glover would have been sent to prison. Just after that—the hatching of this petition was the reawakening of affection on the part of Mrs. Glover toward Mr. Glover following that took place the conversation about the will.

"We will ask you to believe that no sane man, assuming that Mr. Glover was sane although many incidents at the house would indicate brotherly on his part, that no man would have a business man for attorney, a trustee of his business rather than a bank. I think we will show you that this is not the will of Clarence F. Glover. When he put his pen to it he should was forced by a woman who was called his wife. That she was in possession is not a feature because we feel that her presence was not necessary. We ask a fair decision. We say that this will is not the will of Clarence F. Glover."

Witnesses to the Rail.

Jesse Gove then called the witnesses to the rail. There were four, Harold Gardner, an employe at the laundry, and three of the four brothers, Arthur, Norman and Willian. They were sworn and Harold Gardner was called to the stand.

MAY CONEST THE LANGTRY ELECTION

Republican "insurgents," so-called, threw aside the mask in the joint convention of the Legislature to elect a successor to the late Colonel William M. Olin as Secretary of State and, joining the Socialists, overwhelmed the "steam roller" over all opposition for the election of Representative Calvert by Langtry majority.

The Democrats may appeal to the courts as to the constitutionality of the vote by which Langtry was chosen on a partially open ballot. He received 154 votes or just a bare majority necessary for choice against 123 for Frank A. Douglas, the Democratic nominee. The one Socialist in the Legislature voted for John Weaver Sherman of Boston.

R. H. DANA, JR., WILL WED NEXT SATURDAY

NEW YORK, April 27.—Simplicity marks all arrangements for the wedding on Saturday of Miss Ethel Nathalie Smith, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles Nelles Bishop Smith of No. 101 East Sixtieth street, to Richard Henry Dana, Jr. Mr. Dana is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana of Cambridge, Mass. He makes his home in the city however and lives at No. 103 Park avenue. He is an architect.

The ceremony, which will take place at 4 o'clock in Grace Church, will be performed by the bride's father and her uncle, Bishop Mark Antony Smith of Pennsylvania. Miss Smith will have no attendants and Mr. Dana will be attended by one of his brothers as best man. Mr. Dana is the grandson on his mother's side, of Henry W. Longfellow, the poet.

$500,000 PRESENT FOR WESTINGHOUSE

LENOX, April 27.—In fulfilment of a promise made four years ago to her son George Westinghouse, Jr., Mrs. George Westinghouse has purchased a sixty-acre tract adjoining her Erskine Park here and will build a model village for 500 men of young Westinghouse.

When her son was graduated from Yale, in 1900, Mrs. Westinghouse promised to make him a handsome gift at the end of five years when she supposed his business. She entered the works of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company in Pittsburg with overalls and jumper and was graduated himself diligently to the work and risen rapidly by that great concern.

MISS COVELL IS NOW BRIDE OF ARTIST

Miss Florence Covel and Guiseppe Avitabile, an Italian artist, were married yesterday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Alphonso B. Covel, No. 617 Commonwealth avenue, by the Rev. Dr. Francis E. Gordon. Only the members of the family and close friends were present at the ceremony and the informal reception afterward. The bride is a Smith College girl.

A few years ago Miss Covel's sister married the brother of the groom, and it was while she was visiting at their home in Paris that the two became engaged. Sig. Avitabile makes his home in Paris most of the time.

HATTIE LE BLANC'S SECRET TESTIMONY IS TOLD IN COURT

ATTORNEY FOR GLOVER BROTHERS IN WILL CONTEST MERCILESSLY SCORES THE WIDOW.

Q.—Where were you before? A.—Employed in the Waltham laundry.

Q.—How long did you work there? A.—Seven years.

Q.—Did you know Mr and Mrs Glover? A.—I knew Mr. Glover seven years and I have known Mrs. Glover over six.

Q.—Did you see her during the Spring of 1909? A.—Yes, often.

Q.—Where? A.—At her home.

Q.—Do you remember a talk early in that year? A.—I had a long talk Tuesday, March 20.

Q.—What was the conversation? A.—(Judge Hammond instructed the witness to give as nearly as possible the exact language.)

At this point Juror John O. Maloney was attacked with cramps. A short recess was taken and medical assistance summoned. He was able to resume his duties after an interval of ten minutes. Gardner then continued his testimony, relating in plain but unpleasant language a conversation which he said he had with Mrs. Glover relating to the bathroom incident of which so much was made at the trial of Hattie Le Blanc.

Continuing, Gardner said: "Mrs. Glover said me that she caught Hattie by the hair and dragged her from the bathroom into the kitchen and slapped her face." Then, she said, 'I tackled Mr. Glover.'"

Q.—On another occasion did you have a talk with Mrs. Glover? A.—Yes, it was about the middle of April. Mr. Glover and Seymour were down in Maine. Hattie was working in the kitchen and Mrs. Glover and I were talking where she could hear us most of the time.

Q.—Tell what was said when Hattie was present. A.—Mrs. Glover said that Glover went down on his knees and begged her to forgive him. He said it was all his fault that it would never happen again. Next day she sent Hattie back to Boston.

Questioned in the Laundry.

Q.—Well, continue and tell what was said. A.—The next morning Mr. Glover called me into his office. He said:

He knew I had been at the house from 8.45 until 9.30 the morning before and he also knew Mrs. Glover had told me. I told him what Mrs. Glover had told me and that she asked me whether she could trust him or not. I told her that she could, and he also knew that she could not.

Q.—Did you ever speak to Mr. Glover about the marks on his face? A.—Yes, he told me that Hattie had struck him in the night in the bathroom incident.

Redirect Examination by Attorney Cross-examined by Attorney Ross.

Q.—Was this first interview Tuesday, March 20? A.—Yes.

Q.—When was the next one? A.—About the middle of May.

To Readville Races.

Q.—Wasn't it as late as the first of June? A.—No, it was about two weeks before the Readville races. I remember that he and Mrs. Glover and I went down in the automobile to get the races.

Q.—Were things pleasant then? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long did you ride? A.—A couple of hours.

Q.—In this first talk, did she say she had struck Hattie? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did she tell the girl's name? A.—No.

Q.—Did she appear angry at him? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Glover appeared excited when you told him about it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did things run along as before over after that? A.—Yes, after a few days.

Q.—Could Hattie understand you at that time? A.—She could understand me, but not as well as some others. She could speak English.

Q.—Did she tell you that she put an ad in the paper for a position for Hattie? A.—No.

Q.—Well, you weren't working in the laundry, were you, when Glover tricked Hattie into giving him evidence, didn't you? A.—No.

Mr. Ranney then read from the transcript of evidence given at the trial.

Q.—What was Mrs. Glover's reputation for truth and veracity? A.—She was all right to me. I know she always called things by their right name, but she always appeared all right to me.

Court Takes Recess.

This ended Gardner's examination. The morning recess was taken at this point.

William Glover was the first witness. He was questioned by Mr. Gove.

He testified that he saw his brother Clarence last in July, 1909, and was then asked:

Q.—Did you talk about your family affairs? A.—Yes. He asked me how my children were. I said they were doing fine, and I asked him how things were at home. He said: "Well, they're not better than they were the last time I talked to you. My home is a perfect hell."

Q.—Was there anything else? A.—He said that he thought I was doing nobly well to take care of the children and bring them up without a mother to look after them. He said: "You deserve lots of credit."

Q.—Do you remember a talk December, 1909? A.—Yes, I remember it perfectly well. I asked him how his home life was. He said it was hell. I don't know a minute's peace. That woman is after me continually. It is enough to drive a man crazy every day. I don't know what to do. He said I will I could clean up my business affairs I would.

Q.—Did you frequently talk with Clarence about your brother's wife? A.—Up to the last time I saw him.

Q.—How did he speak of Arthur? A.—He spoke as though they were friendly.

Q.—How about Norman? A.—The same.

Q.—Have you seen him with Arthur? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you yourself ever have any difference, any words or quarrel with Arthur? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see him with Albert? A.—Occasionally.

Q.—Did you ever hear of any trouble between them? A.—No.

Q.—And you and he were always friendly? A.—Yes.

The witness was then cross-examined by Mr. Ranney.

Owed Clarence Money.

Q.—Did Clarence ever tell you that Arthur had borrowed some money from him for Larry Smith and that the money was never paid back? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever go into bankruptcy owing Clarence some six or seven hundred dollars which he never got. A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Clarence ever mention that to you? A.—No. It was at his instigation that I went into bankruptcy.

Q.—How many times were you in the laundry within the last year and a half? A.—Never.

Q.—Did you ever spend a Christmas or Thanksgiving at the home of Clarence Glover in the last year and a half? A.—No.

Q.—Were you in his house at that time? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever receive a letter or a postal card from him in that time? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see Larry Smith after the will was made and prior to the trial in the Probate Court? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you recall going to Attorney Macomber's office in Waltham on the Friday before after the death and when District Attorney Higgins was present? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had you talked with Larry Smith prior to that time? A.—No.

Q.—Then what you said in MacFarlan's office was from your own memory? A.—Yes.

Old Testimony Recalled.

Mr. Ranney then began reading from a transcript of what was said in MacFarlan's office on the Friday night after the tragedy.

Q.—Do you remember this question and answer: "When did you see Clarence last? I haven't had a conversation with Arthur since Clarence died. Do you remember that? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then did you see his wife last? I haven't seen his wife for over seven months. Do you remember saying that? A.—Yes.

Mr. Gove then asked:

Q.—Why were you not in Clarence's home Thanksgiving? A.—No reason.

Q.—Was there any other reason why you didn't go to Clarence's home for seven years? A.—No.

Q.—What was that reason? A.—Because I didn't believe Mrs. Glover was a fit person to associate with and I didn't want my children ever over my children's graves.

Justice Hammond instructed the jury that the last answer of the witness was not the reason, but the witness's reason for not necessarily the truth.

Arthur Glover Called.

Arthur Glover was then called to the stand. He said that he was forty-one years old, living at No. 18 Harris avenue, Jamaica Plain. He said that the last time he saw Clarence was about three weeks before his death. He said they met on the street and had a short talk.

Q.—When was the last time before that? A.—It was just before Labor Day. He asked me how I was getting along, and they were all right, and I asked him how things were at home. He said, "Things are unpleasant there." He told me he was living by himself in the laundry and that if he could get a good price for it he would clear out and go away. He said his wife never let him be quiet and that sometimes she threatened to kill him.

Q.—When did you see him before that? A.—There was a time in May, 1909. He told that his home affairs were none too pleasant. He said he hoped that he would always feel that he had done as near right as he could as near as he could. He said that he always wanted to. He said something about the will and that he hoped it would be right. He could not remember what it was.

Q.—When was the last time before that? A.—My wife and I took one day in Tremont street. He said that things at home were just the same as ever. He said that he was going to make a will and although he could not do as he liked toward us he hoped we would remember his sister was always with us. He said: "My wife has raised up hell with me, and I can do as I'd like to."

Q.—When did you see him before that? A.—Well, there was one occasion when he said he would like to take me out to the ball game, but he said, "Arthur, you know how he is. She's apt to go off any time with loud language in front of the children."

More Talk of Home.

Q.—What was the conversation at the Quincy House in the Summer of 1908? A.—He asked about the children and said he was glad I was so happy in married life. The reason he gave for not asking me out was that Clarence didn't like to go place to go.

Q.—What were your relations with Clarence? A.—Always friendly.

Q.—Did he ever make any complaint on your part or on the part of your family? A.—None whatever.

Q.—Did he ever mention William when he met you? A.—He always asked how William and his children were getting along.

Q.—Did he say anything about Albert? A.—He'd always ask how he was getting along.

Q.—Did he say anything about Norman? A.—He would always ask how he was getting along and how his children were.

Q.—Did you ever hear him make any complaint about any of your brothers? A.—No.

The witness was then cross-examined by Mr. Ranney.

Q.—Ever go to your brother's house in the last year and a half? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever spend a Christmas or Thanksgiving at your brother's house in the last year and a half? A.—No.

Mr. Smith, the Detective.

Q.—Did any of you boys, with the exception of Seymour, live with Clarence in the last two or three years? A.—No.

Q.—You married one of the daughters of Larry Smith? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Larry Smith engaged as a detective to dig up evidence in the will case? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember questions being asked by Mr. Higgins in MacFarlan's office? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember this. (Reading from the transcript of what was said at that time.) What do you know about it? "The only thing I know about it is a couple of fourteen years ago in Beachmont, she made a statement regarding his life." Do you remember that? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—In the last year and a half do you remember Clarence calling Arthur a liar? A.—No.

Q.—Do you remember Clarence calling him a crook? A.—No.

Q.—Do you remember him calling him a blackmailer? A.—No.

Q.—Were you bitter toward Mrs. Glover? A.—Not especially.

Q.—In the will case did you testify that you knew even if you won this suit that he would not affect Mrs. Glover? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was your motive to throw suspicion on Mrs. Glover? A.—No.

Q.—Was it for money? A.—No.

Punishment a Motive.

Q.—Was it to punish Seymour for standing by the widow? A.—That was one motive.

Q.—Have any of the brothers except Seymour been out to the Glover home during the two years before the murder? A.—No.

Q.—At the conference in MacFarlan's office did you brothers offer to guarantee to Seymour his full share under the will if he would join you against the widow? A.—No, we offered to do it if he would help us find the murderer.

Q.—Were you at that time suspicious of the widow? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you at Waltham the night of the murder? A.—No.

Q.—You had no personal knowledge of the events of that night? A.—No.

Q.—Did any of your brothers? A.—No.

Court adjourned at this point for the noon recess.

Norman Glover on Stand.

Norman Glover, younger brother of Clarence Glover, was called as the witness when court resumed for the afternoon session. He was questioned by Mr. Gove.

Q.—What conversation have you had in the last year and a half with Clarence in regard to his home life? A.—He said he was constantly in fear of his wife, that he was afraid something was going to happen and that she had threatened to shoot him. He said conditions in his Waltham home were just as bad as before. He said he had his pals and was always quarreling.

Q.—What were the relations between you and Clarence? A.—Very friendly.

Q.—Did Clarence ever speak about Arthur, Albert and William? A.—Very pleasantly.

Q.—What did he say to you about his others? A.—He asked about their families and how they were getting along.

Lawyer Fletcher Ranney announced that he had thought of some things that he had neglected to say in his argument yesterday and asked permission to continue today. It was granted. He said:

"Before Mrs. Glover died a young girl, Hattie Le Blanc, entered into the Glover household at Waltham. On occasion Mrs. Glover found her husband with this young girl. She was sent away for a few days. She was again taken back into the Glover home and things continued before the incident.

Tragedy in Laundry.

"On the night of November 20 Mr. Glover died. He died of violence. It is incumbent upon us to show that the making of his will are two different events, if, however, the other side tries to connect the two events and we try to meet them, and if we shall not attempt to show it. Whoever else was there in the laundry, Mr. Glover is certain, was there. From the laundry Mr. Glover went to the Waltham hospital. He talked and he told of whom he was with.

"He told of what was done with his revolver. Take the evidence that comes to you here and consider it carefully. Consider nothing else. The widow we shall show you, never knew the will was made. We will show you that Mr. Glover was a strenuous and healthy man. The will itself shows that no undue influence was used because the widow received and has the will than if no will at all were made."

Alton F. Tupper, Samuel D. Elmore and Mrs. Elmore were then called. They all were sworn in by Clerk Ralph Smith. A. Judson Inter Martin Farrington John J. Higgins entered and he was sworn with the others.

Tupper is First Witness.

Alton F. Tupper was the first witness called. He testified that he was a law partner of Mr. Hastie. He was questioned by Mr. Ranney.

Q.—On April 17, 1909, were you in the office of Mr. Hastie? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know Clarence F. Glover? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Glover sign a paper? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is this your signature? (Showing the will.) A.—Yes, sir, it is.

Q.—Did you sign this paper after Mr. Glover did? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And in your opinion was Mr. Glover of sound mind at that time? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see others sign that paper at the same time? A.—Yes.

The witness was not cross-examined. John J. Higgins, city solicitor of Middlesex County, was the next witness. He identified the will as Mr. Elmore's office on the same day in April and witnessed the will of Clarence F. Glover. He stated that in his opinion Mr. Glover was of sound mind at that time.

Mrs. Susie C. Elmore, wife of Samuel D. Elmore, was the next witness. She testified that she was called to Cobb's house to witness and was sent home to die. Hearing of Kennedy's Laxative, I began treatment, and was cured.

$35,000 PRIZE COUPON DISTRICT 1 VOTE

NAME

ADDRESS

TOWN AND STATE

VALUELESS AFTER MAY 11, 1911.

REAL MELON FOR CONTESTANTS

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

The Contest Editor is "cutting a melon" for his stockholders.

"Cutting a melon" is financial slang for declaring an extra dividend or an unusually large regular dividend for stockholders in a corporation. It means more money for the stockholders. "Cutting a melon" is one of the most delightful occurences in a stockholder's life.

Well, this Opportunity Week in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest is the biggest kind of an extra dividend for candidates. They get a double portion on all subscriptions turned in during Opportunity Week.

As this is a double count it means a 100 per cent dividend. Any corporation which declares a 100 per cent. dividend cuts the biggest kind of a "melon" for its stockholders.

Results Count Twice.

If this double count on all subscription vote credits isn't 100 per cent. extra for candidates, then the Contest Editor would like to know what it is. Candidates get just double the results during Opportunity Week for the ordinary amount of work.

Every subscription counts double. Candidates who are turning in subscriptions this week are sharing that Opportunity Week "melon." And a mighty juicy, sweet-flavored "melon" it is, too.

This Opportunity Week closes next Saturday night, 10 p. m. The Contest Department at No. 225 Devonshire street will be open up to 10 o'clock next Saturday night to receive votes and subscriptions.

Subscriptions and votes sent by mail up to 10 o'clock next Saturday night, as shown by the postmark, will be accepted for the Opportunity Week count.

But candidates are strongly urged not to wait till the last minute before turning in their votes and subscriptions, particularly the latter. Delay in turning in subscription vote cuts the delivery of papers to subscribers just so much. It may mean loss of the next Sunday coupon, which is good for ten votes. Candidates need to bear this in mind.

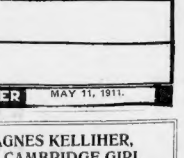
Standings Early in May.

Candidates have been told that the next list of standing, including individual vote totals, will be printed as soon as it can be compiled after Opportunity Week closes Saturday night, May 6. It also means that the voting strength of every candidate will be shown, not only in that candidate's list also to every other candidate. It means that, if you are doing well in the Contest, it will be known, and that it will also be known if you are not doing well.

It is most necessary, therefore, to take fullest advantage of Opportunity Week in order to rank high in the next list of standing.

Only the District Two candidates is a Cambridge schoolgirl. She is Miss Agnes Kelliher, 23 St. James street, a Normal School in the University City. Agnes says:

AGNES KELLIHER, CAMBRIDGE GIRL, IN PRIZE CONTEST



AGNES KELLIHER.

"I am after that automobile prize in District Two and I am going to get it if my friends will only do their best for me."

Agnes is a bright girl and an active candidate. She has enlisted her schoolmates and other friends in her campaign for votes and subscriptions, and is confident of being owner of that District Two Velie automobile when this Contest is closed and the prizes are awarded.

Were Deaf—Now Hear

Remarkable Experience of Those Dead to the World of Sound With a New Treatment for Deafness That Is Wonderfully Efficient. One Month's Treatment FREE.

WERE DEAF---NOW HEAR

Mr. F. F. Bacon, 4 Rock st., Roxbury: "I was totally deaf in my right ear. The Osmo-Chemic restored my hearing and I hear again perfectly in my right ear."

Mr. Jacob R. Sulham, So. Hanson: "I call them deaf in my left ear since 1903. In my right ear for about four years, could not hear windinal clock. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear clock tick 15 feet away with both ears."

Miss Nellie M. Brown, who resides at 23 Ash from Cambridge, says: "I was very deaf. I could not hear ordinary conversation. I was treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians for two months, and I can hear again as well as I ever could."

Mrs. Nellie Tessoras, 18 High St., Beverly: "I was so deaf that I could not understand ordinary conversation. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me, my hearing has returned."

Mrs. Margaret Kimball, 121 Oliver St., Lin: "I could not hear a sound with my left ear. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear a watch tick."

Mrs. Fannie Record, 15 Vancouver St., Roxbury: "I was practically deaf. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I hear and understand lecture."

Mrs. A. L. Baker, 236 Spring St., Medford, and her son, practically deaf, were treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and both can now hear perfectly again.

TEN YEARS YOUNGER

Mr. Roland J. Ferguson, who resides at 373 Medford St., Somerville, has for years been engaged in the trucking business for thirty-four years at 272 Atlantic Ave., Boston. He said to the writer: "All my friends know what the Osmo-Chemic Physicians have done for me. I will gladly tell others them in person or over the telephone, if they will call or 'phone me, Richmond. When I went to them for treatment I had so much catarrh of the head and throat, I had a cough for forty years, and I had been told that I had consumption. Doctors had treated me for Pleurisy at different times, but only gave me temporary relief. I read how the Osmo-Chemic Physicians were curing cases of Bronchitis, and I had them treat me, with the result that although I am ten years younger in age, I feel ten years younger."

LAST DAYS---ONE MONTH FREE

The Osmo-Chemic Physicians, the great scientists, in order to demonstrate their skill in the cure of Deafness by the New Discovery, will give all patients who are deaf, who begin a new treatment on or before APRIL 20th, one month's treatment, including all medicine, ABSOLUTELY FREE. This means that after you bring the cost of a course of treatment sufficient to cure the most stubborn case, there will be no bill to meet. Any one suffering from Deafness can avail themselves of this liberal offer. It is limited only as to time. It is clear that such an offer cannot be continued indefinitely. Only 3 days remain.

ABSCESS AND NEURITIS CURED

Mrs. Martina Glowatzki, who resides at No. 11 Clement St., Medford, Mass., says: "I was very much troubled for ten years with abscesses, and had been treated by many doctors, without receiving any relief until the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me. They cured my abscesses, and cured me, and I have not had an abscess since. I can truthfully say that the Osmo-Chemic Physicians cured it to stay cured."

OSMO-CHEMIC SYSTEM OF MEDICINE

SAYS WIDOW THRASHED GLOVER

WILL CASE WITNESS TELLS OF PUNISHMENT TO LAUNDRYMAN.

Glover and that in her opinion Glover was of sound mind at the time.

Excused From Cross-Examination.

None of these witnesses was cross-examined. Mr. Ranney then offered into the will in evidence. It was read to the jury and admitted. Mr. Ranney then announced that he rested his case.

Edward P. Barry began the opening for the contestants at 9:50 o'clock. Mr. Barry said:

"We say that Mrs. Glover would be better off under the will than otherwise in spite of the contention of my brother. We will show that the income from the land dry has been equal to $1,000 a month —$12,000 a year.

"We will show you by the evidence that Mrs. Glover had Seymour Glover's name put into that testament, that she forced Mr. Glover by intrigue, blackening and threats to put the name of Seymour Glover into the testament. We will show you that Clarence F. Glover did not put into the will the clause that in case of the death of Seymour Glover the money should go to the kin of Seymour. We will show you that the money should not go to any stranger.

"We will admit Mrs. Glover is of French descent, but because Mrs. Glover is of French descent we will not agree with our brother that she is terse, coarse and almost masculine. We will show to you by evidence whether or not she is the sort of woman who can hand a rod of steel. We will show you she is a prevaricator, a charlatan and a creature by heart temperamentally serious; she is just that sort of creature to bend a man with a will of iron. There are many men who pale before a woman and she is just that sort of a woman.

Mrs. Glover Is Accused.

"Mr. Ranney said there were quarrels in the house. Yes, gentlemen, there were quarrels in the house. There were fights, vicious fights, and the end was a vicious fight. There were threats to kill. We intend to ask you what was the mind of that man to whom such threats had been made. We intend to show you that widow knew there was a will. We intend to show you that prior to the execution of the will that there was a grand fight and she said to Glover, 'You just Seymour in the will.'

"This is according to the little French girl who overheard the conversation."

Mr. Ranney objected to this last statement and Judge Hammond said: "She is stating what he is trying to prove and I see no reason to caution him at this point."

Mr. Ranney still objected and Mr. Barry said that he would withdraw the statement if he did not with any exception. Judge Hammond said: "Counsel should be careful in their statements and not make statements which they wish to withdraw." Mr. Barry continued:

"We expect to prove that Mrs. Glover said that the reason she wanted Seymour in the will was that she could do what she wished because Seymour was a poor innocent creature. It may have been a subterfuge on her part. We ask you to believe what she said about Seymour was true and that with his aid her income might be greater.

Glover Brothers to Testify.

"We will present to you the brothers of Clarence Glover, who will tell you their honest, homely story in their own way. They will tell you there was no estrangement between them and Clarence. They will tell you that they met Clarence frequently. They will tell you why they never entered the house of Clarence Glover.

"Whenever he talked of his brothers it was of love and affection for them and just the adverse of his wife. We will show what happened in late March, three weeks prior to the signing of the will.

"We will show you one person in the employ of Mr. Glover was called for aid who would have passed Mr. Glover in a compounding position. If counsel think Glover would have been sent to prison three after that—the hatching of this plot—there was the necessity for compounding on the part of Mrs. Glover toward Mr. Glover. Following that took place the conversation about the will.

"We will ask you to believe that no woman, assuming that Mr. Glover was sane, although many incidents at the house would indicate hysteria on his part, but no man would have a business man for attorney, a trustee of his business rather than a bank. I think we will show you that this is not the will of Clarence F. Glover. When he put his pen to it his mind was forced by a woman who was called his wife. That she was not present is not a feature because we feel that her presence was not necessary. We ask for a fair decision. We say that this will is not the will of Clarence F. Glover."

Witnesses to the Rail.

Jesse Gove then called the witnesses to the rail. There were four, Harold Gardner, an employe at the Back Bay station, and the four brothers, Arthur, Norman and William. They were sworn and Harold Gardner was called to the stand.

MAY CONEST THE LANGTRY ELECTION

Republican "insurgents," so-called, threw aside the mask in the joint convention of the Legislature to elect a successor to the late Colonel William M. Olin as Secretary of State and joined the State machine, pushed the "steam roller" over all opposition for the election of Representative Albert P. Langtry of Springfield.

The Democrats may appeal to the courts as to the constitutionality of the vote by which Langtry was chosen on a partially open ballot. He received 141 votes or only less than a majority, there being a choice against 123 for Frank J. Donahue, the Democratic nominee. The one Socialist in the Legislature voted for John Weaver Sherman of Boston.

R. H. DANA, JR., WILL WED NEXT SATURDAY

NEW YORK, April 27.—Simplicity marks all arrangements for the wedding on Saturday of Miss Ethel Nathalie Smith, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius Bishop Smith of No. 101 East Sixty-ninth street, to Richard Henry Dana, Jr. Mr. Dana is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana of Cambridge, Mass. He makes his home in this city, however, and lives at No. 303 Park avenue. He is an architect.

The ceremony, which will take place at 5 o'clock in the grace church, will be performed by the bride's father and her uncle, Bishop Mackay-Smith of Pennsylvania. Miss Smith will have no attendants and Mr. Dana will be attended by one of his brothers as best man. Mr. Dana is the grandson on his mother's side of the late Henry W. Longfellow, the poet.

$500,000 PRESENT FOR WESTINGHOUSE

LENOX, April 27.—In fulfilment of a promise made four years ago by her son, George Westinghouse, Jr., Mrs. George Westinghouse has purchased a sixty-acre tract adjoining her Erskine Park here and will build a home at a cost in excess of $500,000 for Westinghouse.

When her son was graduated from Yale, in 1900, Mrs. Westinghouse promised to make him a handsome gift at the end of five years if he showed ability in business. He entered the works of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company in Pittsburg with overalls and pick to dig, and for five years applied himself diligently to the work and risen rapidly in that great concern.

MISS COVELL IS NOW BRIDE OF ARTIST

Miss Florence Covel and Gulseppe Avitabile, an Italian artist, were married yesterday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Alphonso S. Covel, No. 617 Commonwealth avenue by the Rev. Dr. George H. Bartlett. Only the members of the family and close friends were present for the ceremony and an informal reception afterward. The bride is a Smith College girl.

A few years ago Miss Covel's sister married the brother of the groom, and it was while she was visiting at their home in Paris that the romance of the young people budded. Signor Avitabile makes his home in Paris most of the time.

EVANS COTTAGE ON SEA VOYAGE

The Evans cottage, to which President Taft for two Summers transferred his activities as the Chief Executive of the United States, started today at 9 o'clock on a sea voyage. The Summer Capitol had been moved from its foundations in Beverly, rolled to the shore, maneuvered on to rafts and towed out into Salem Harbor by tugs. Its destination is Peaches Point at Marblehead, where it will be firmly planted upon a rock for another tenant than the President.

HARVARD SQUARE EIGHT MINUTES

Eight minutes, including two stops, will be the running time between Harvard square, Cambridge, and Park street, or less than a third of the time it now takes when the new Cambridge subway opens December 1. Work has progressed so rapidly the Elevated company says, that the service will be in operation on that date. The Washington street tunnel, built by the Boston Transit Commission, was five years building. The Cambridge line was begun in August, 1909.

The greatest street railway terminal in the world will be at Harvard square, where the subway and surface cars will unload and fill on two levels on a plan that will be capable of handling the greatest possible crowd without confusion or discomfort.

It will cost $12,000,000 to complete the system.

Another remarkable feature will be the modern train yard in Cambridge, just beyond the entrance to the subway. It will be 700 feet long and 200 feet wide and will include a repair shop in which 110 subway cars can be stored, repaired and inspected at the same time.

The forty new cars that will be run in trains of two and four cars each will be seventy feet long. The present cars are forty-six feet long. The new cars are wider, too, and will accommodate 50 per cent more people.

JOHN MITCHELL AT CITY CLUB TO-NIGHT

The Boston City Club entertainment season will close this evening with the appearance of John Mitchell, who will deliver an address on "The Philosophy, Purposes and Ideals of the Trade Union Movement." William H. O'Brien, president of the Boston Central Labor Union, will preside. Edward A. Filene will be toastmaster at the dinner to be tendered Mr. Mitchell previous to the address in the Auditorium. Many of the labor leaders of New England will be present, including Henry Sterling, Arthur W. Huddell and James Duncan. Dr. Charles Fleischer, the Rev. Harold Marshall, George H. Ellis and Senator George L. Barber will speak.

SUN ECLIPSED, BUT SHINES FOR BOSTON

There will be a total eclipse of the sun to-morrow, but Boston will miss it. It will be visible in the United States only south of a line running from Portland, Ore., through Milwaukee and Pittsburg to Washington. Chicago will have a five-minute view. Parties of scientists from English and American observatories have gone to the Fijian Islands to witness the eclipse. Total obscuration will last only four minutes.

Court Orders Kaiser To Repay Actress.

BERLIN—Two actresses got into a row at the Kaiser's theatre in Weisbaden some time ago and one of them, named Hetzlaeff, was discharged because of the trouble and has since been out of employment. She brought suit against the Kaiser and a court has given judgment in her favor, ordering the Emperor to repay her the amount she lost while out of employment. The Kaiser is to refund 2,000 marks.

Dig for Bacon's Works in River.

CHEPSTOW, Monmouthshire—Dr. Orville W. Owen of Detroit and his assistants have resumed their work in the bed of the River Wye. The American believes that the boatlike structure discovered at the bottom of the river is the long hidden cache supposed to contain Francis Bacon's manuscripts.

Kitchener in a Peer's Robes.

London—Lord Kitchener took his seat in the House of Lords last night for the first time, though he was created a peer over twelve years ago. Wearing his peer's robes, Lord Kitchener walked to the table accompanied by his sponsors, Lords Morley and Milner, and took the oath and signed the roll as a Viscount.

CHEAPER MILK BY NEW COMBINE

Boston will have milk at six or seven cents a quart in the Summer months and seven and eight cents a quart in the Winter unless there is some hitch in the plans of the Producers and Consumers' Milk Company which has just been incorporated at Worcester. Cheaper milk for Boston is the promise of the new company's leaders.

The company will draw its supply largely from Worcester county, where, they say, the best milk in New England is produced. Fifty thousand dollars is the capitalization of the new rival to the milk "trust" and at its head is Charles H. Sage of New Braintree, who has long been a leader in the fight against the contractors who supply Boston.

The shares of the corporation are of $10 par value, set at this figure in order that producers of small means may become members and have some voice in the administration of the concern that proposes to handle their product.

Offices in Boston.

It is now planned to open up offices here in the Hub and to begin the work of preparation before the end of the Summer. The milk output of Worcester will be brought here in the company's own refrigerator cars and distributed in the company's own teams.

The formation of the company has been in progress since the Massachusetts producers struck and refused to ship their produce to the firms that have had a monopoly on the local trade. Those who are back of the project say that they have already made arrangements to affect other independent milk shippers who have a hand time to place their supply here.

"We had not heard of the formation of the Consumers Company," said D. Whiting & Co., when told of the new corporation to-day, "but we have nothing to fear from their competition. Even granting that they could bring milk here and undersell us, which we are pretty sure they cannot do, it would take a great deal of time and money to establish such a business here."

The Officers.

The officers of the Producers and Consumers' Company are: President, Charles D. Sage, New Braintree, vice-president Orus E. Parker, Brimfield; clerk, Edwin R. Sage, Cambridge; treasurer, Warren C. Jewett, Worcester; directors, C. D. Sage, O. E. Parker, Hon. Edward A. Cowee, W. C. Jewett, E. R. Sage.

Worcester stockholders are John C. Macinnes, Edwin P. Curtis, Charles W. Wood, W. C. Jewett, E. A. Cowee and Frank P. Knowles.

This Simple Tonic Great Health Aid

(From Donner Press)

The first signs of warm weather—spring fever, poor appetites, pale, sallow, pimply faces and that tired, drowsy, overworked feeling—remind us of the urgent need of taking preventive measures to ward off sickness and give us energy and good health. At this season of the year no one should neglect taking a good tonic to purify the blood and build up the body with strength and energy.

No better tonic can be had than the good old-fashioned one made at home at small cost by dissolving an ounce of kardene in one-half pint alcohol, adding one-half cup sugar and hot water to make a full quart.

A tablespoonful before each meal will do wonders for those who feel "all gone" after the strain of winter or who feel sick and yet don't know just what's the matter.

COLLEGE GIRLS IN OPERETTA

The girls of Jackson College, the new girls' institution under Tufts management, will perform for the first time in college theatricals before "mere men" as a part of the audience to-night, to commemorate the first anniversary of the college.

In the gymnasium will be presented an operetta by Frederick F. Bullard entitled "Jack and the Baked Bean Stalk." The general public will be admitted. Hitherto feminine audiences only were allowed.

The cast follows: Princess Belle-A-Belle will be played by Miss Elaine Jones, daughter of Professor Richard Jones of the English department of Tufts College. The fairy, Little Old Lady, will be taken by Miss Mary B. Dodd of Lexington. Miss Evelyn Hearsey will play the part of the Ogre, who prefers baked beans to the diet of human flesh customary for ogres. The remaining part, Jack, a student, is played by Miss Etta M. Phillips.

There are two choruses, one of "attendants," the other of "comrades." There is also the part of a little black dwarf. No girl sufficiently diminutive could be secured, so the services of twelve-year-old Donald Rockwell, the son of Professor Edward Rockwell, were required.

The arrangements are under the direction of the entertainment committee of the All-Around Club, composed of Miss Gladys Wiener of Pembroke, Me., Miss Gladys Cobb of Mansfield and Miss Etta M. Phillips of Lowell.

FOSS ARRAIGNS TAX DODGERS

WORCESTER, April 27.—In his speech at the banquet of the Board of Trade, Governor Foss severely condemned wealthy tax dodgers and said that direct taxation was far preferable, morally and politically, to the antiquated and unfair indirect method. He said in part:

"Recent disclosures of acts to evade the taxation of property, and a large number of removals of wealthy taxpayers from industrial centres to a few favored residential towns, as well as a still larger number of prospective removals, have produced conditions under which it has become my duty to take action in this matter.

"Two things I believe to be evident. The people of Massachusetts, like those of other cities, have come to believe that the burden of taxation is not at present distributed in an equitable manner. From indirect taxation, such as has long been practiced by the federal government, they are turning to direct taxation, and are demanding that, through a federal income tax, the wealth of the country shall contribute in a just and equal manner to the support of federal expenditures, and in State taxation, I believe, our people are coming to the conviction that wholesale evasion of our State taxation, as in national, they state that wealth shall contribute its just share to the support of public charges and in this demand I believe they are absolutely right.

"I believe that direct taxation is better, both morally and politically, than indirect, and that the duty of the host in Massachusetts is to provide the State with a just and equitable system of direct taxation.

"Our tax laws must be enforced at any cost, and the wealth of the State must contribute in just measure to the needs of the Commonwealth and of the cities and towns. We cannot, however, have a system of equal and enforceable tax laws unless we can devise one under which capital will be encouraged to come to Massachusetts and to stay here.

BUFFALO, N. Y., HAS A $250,000 FIRE

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 27.—Fire destroyed the large building of the Buffalo Glass Company at Nos. 96 and 98 Seneca street early to-day with a loss estimated at over $250,000. Twenty firemen were blown from the building by an explosion and several of them were seriously injured, but none fatally.

TAFT PRAISES IRISH VETERANS

NEW YORK, April 27.—"There is something as harmonious between the Irishman and the fight as there is between nature and the color green," remarked President Taft last night at the dinner of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, commemorating the departure of that military body for the civil war, fifty years ago. His words kindled anew the long cheers that had greeted his arrival at the dinner, and every Irish heart in the room—and there were nearly all Irish—went out to the President in a spontaneous feeling of good will and loyalty.

President Taft was greeted with great enthusiasm, and the proposal of his health by Justice Edward E. McCall, who presided, was the signal for another outburst of applause.

The President Cheered.

"It would be a presumption on the part of any one to attempt an introduction of our loved executive," said Justice McCall, and it took several minutes before the President was able to utter his first words. "I rejoice and feel highly honored to take part with you in doing honor to the veterans who did honor to their country fifty years ago," said Mr. Taft. "There is something as harmonious between the Irishman and the fight as there is between nature and the color green.

"I suppose—for I don't suppose—that anybody now reads the novels that seemed so interesting to me in my youth, I remember the books of Charles O'Malley and the Micky Free and the stories of the brave Irish dragoon that shocked me early how the Irishman loves to fight. There is an association between a fight and a feast that makes the feast a delightful thing to take part in.

"All Are Americans."

"I am glad to be here as President and to recognize the value to the community of a national guard regiment like yours. You are all Americans, if you are Irish men by birth, and I want to say how glad I am to be able to show my interest in your regiment and my appreciation of its history, and everybody who knows the history of the great struggle knows what this regiment has done for the country.

"It seems whenever I strike New York I must keep a large number of engagements, and that I cannot give more than five minutes in each place. It seems to me as if I were doing what I did when I ran for the Presidency. But somehow I shall come here and have a long talk with you."

MELLEN-FOSS TALK ON DOCKS

President Mellen and Vice-President Byrnes of the New Haven system walked out of the office of Governor Foss at 10:45 to-day after a conference that lasted exactly one hour.

Mr. Mellen had nothing to say and Vice-President Byrnes announced the fact in the following words:

"Absolutely nothing to say. Any statement in regard to this conference must come from Governor Foss."

Governor's Statement.

Governor Foss issued the following statement:

"President Mellen indicated his great interest in what the State proposed to do to develop the harbor of Boston, and thought that the Commonwealth could not act too quickly. 'It is of the greatest importance,' he said, 'to get our facilities ready for the large modern ships which are fast relegating the old-time sailing vessels to oblivion.'

"Mr. Mellen heartily approved of the immediate proposed expenditure of $3,000,000 at East Boston, which will, of course, care for the railroads terminating there—the Boston & Maine and the Boston & Albany. The north side of the city commands so much larger percentage of the export trade that its immediate development is necessary. He would also like to see additional developments at South Boston, and said that the New Haven road would co-operate in every way possible.

Co-operation Desired.

"His companies are planning very large expenditures for new development and equipment, and President Mellen indicated that he would welcome the right and proper co-operation not only of the Commonwealth, but all of the other railroad corporations which would come into this port and join with his companies in doing their fair share in this development.

"The gentlemen talked over the railroad situation in general and both Mr. Mellen and Mr. Byrnes evinced the greatest desire to aid in this work of making Boston one of the greatest ports in the world, and declared that with the right kind of co-operation this could be brought about very readily.

"Mr. Mellen wanted the people to understand that the New Haven road was as desirous as the people of Boston to bring about its greater development, and would meet in a spirit of friendliness the efforts of the different organizations and Commonwealth."

B. & A. DEAL MADE PUBLIC

The Railroad Commission to-day gave out the terms under which the New Haven Railroad will operate the Boston & Albany division of the New York Central lines after July 1. The Boston & Albany is placed in the sole charge of a general manager, who has supreme power over the maintenance, operation and supervision of the road so far as this conforms with the State and Federal statutes. He has the power to appoint and discharge all persons in the maintenance, operation and management of the road.

The agreement stipulates that the Boston & Albany is under a ninety-nine year lease to the New York Central railroad beginning July 1, 1900. It states that the Boston & Albany connects at Springfield with the main lines of the New Haven road so as to form convenient through traffic between New York and Boston; that the main line of the Boston & Albany running east and west connects with the roads owned or controlled by the New Haven running north and south; that these roads and connections form convenient facilities for handling freight and passengers, and that the combination of these lines in a through working agreement will be advantageous to the business served by such through routes and by increasing the business done over the Boston & Albany; that the New York Central in developing the business of the Boston & Albany has offered to the New Haven a half-interest in the net pecuniary results to accrue hereafter from the operation of the Boston & Albany.

The agreement provides that:

1. The New Haven shall maintain a through route for passengers and freight traffic over connecting lines between Boston and New York, via Springfield, and also such additional through routes for freight and passenger traffic, or both, over connecting lines as may be required in the public interest. That every effort shall be used to increase the business of the Boston & Albany and that through train service shall be maintained through New York, Rotterdam Junction and through other points where the system now or hereafter connects. That the same or equal service as at present shall be maintained. That freight and passenger traffic shall be moved at as favorable rates as may be accorded to any other line via any junction between the same points, and that through billing, through car service, through tickets and baggage checks shall be given.

2. That the Central company will operate the Boston & Albany as a separate property under the sole charge and direction of a general manager to be appointed by and to be removable by the Central company. It shall be the duty of the general manager to secure the proper maintenance, operation and management of the road so as to comply with the lease and so that the railroad may properly and satisfactorily perform its function as a common carrier of goods and passengers; and that the general manager shall have the power to appoint and discharge all persons engaged in all departments of the road. Each of the two parties shall share equally in the net profits of the operation of the road.

3. Neither party shall be held by the agreement to do, or omit to do, any act or thing contrary to any city, State or Federal statute, or any order or regulation lawfully made.

4. The agreement shall be effective July 1 for a period of ten years and thereafter may be terminated. The agreement is signed by President W. C. Brown of the New York Central and President C. S. Mellen of the New Haven.

ADELAIDE COATES A NEW YORK BRIDE

NEW YORK, April 27.—Miss Adelaide Kingsley Coates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Coates, of No. 331 West Seventy-first street, became the bride last night of John Clarke Matthai of Baltimore. The wedding took place at the St. Regis, and was attended by a host of friends and relatives of the young couple. The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock in the gold room, before an improvised altar of white roses, daisies and palms, by Bishop David H. Greer. It was followed by a large reception.

CITY AND STATE JOIN IN INVITING GRAND TRUNK R. R. TO BOSTON

ORDER IN LEGISLATURE CALLS FOR TERMINAL HERE; MAYOR APPROVES OF PLAN.

Boston to-day extended an official invitation to the Grand Trunk Railroad system to come into Boston.

Mayor Fitzgerald transmitted to the Grand Trunk directors a copy of the resolutions passed by the City Council indorsing the AMERICAN'S campaign for the entrance of the Grand Trunk into this city.

Mayor Fitzgerald's letter follows:

CITY OF BOSTON, office of the Mayor, April 26, 1911.

To the Directors, Grand Trunk Railroad, Ottawa, Canada.

GENTLEMEN: The following resolutions were passed by the Boston City Council at its meeting of April 24:

"Whereas, the bill to establish reciprocal relations between the United States and the Dominion of Canada has been favorably considered by the National House of Representatives; and

"Whereas, the adoption of the measure by the Senate of the United States seems assured; and

"Whereas, the final passage of the bill will result in a general revival of commercial development in New England; therefore

"Be it resolved, that we, the Council of Boston, in meeting assembled, do heartily indorse the movement for the establishment by the Grand Trunk Railroad of a terminus at Boston; and be it further

"Resolved, that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the directors of the Grand Trunk Railroad."

As Mayor of the city, I feel it my duty to express my approval of these resolutions, and to assure you that the citizens of Boston would welcome the establishment by the Grand Trunk Railroad of a terminus in this city. The entrance of your road into Boston would complete the natural trade route, with a satisfactory outlet, from the northwestern provinces to the sea, and the Dominion of Canada would participate in its advantages no less than the City of Boston and the transportation company. I have been glad to further such a mutually profitable arrangement and trust that the plans which are said to be under way may be carried to a successful issue.

Very truly yours,

JOHN F. FITZGERALD, Mayor.

The House and Senate of Massachusetts to-day consider the resolutions introduced yesterday, inviting the Grand Trunk Railroad to come to Boston.

A large proportion of the members of the Legislature has already signed the AMERICAN petition and the indications stand an excellent chance of passing both houses.

The success of the AMERICAN petition has exceeded all expectations. The movement is no longer the effort of one newspaper but is indorsed by all the newspapers and the leading business men, labor interests and public generally.

"Grand Trunk Only Salvation."

"The Grand Trunk petition is the most popular, practical and beneficial thing ever undertaken by a newspaper," says Henry C. Long, one of the best known attorneys in Boston. His statement is echoed by scores of influential business men and others who have sent in their personal opinions of the movement in company with petitions containing in some cases several hundred signatures.

Boston is thoroughly and properly aroused. The grabbing of the Boston & Albany by the New Haven interests has removed the last vestige of local railroad independence, and business men, politicians and all wage earners are eager to see the Grand Trunk come to Boston.

"The Grand Trunk is now our only salvation," declares George H. Polley, a prominent book importer.

Commerce Members Sign Petition.

The Chamber of Commerce semi-monthly Assembly took place at the American House yesterday afternoon. Some 200 members were present and nearly every one added his name to the AMERICAN Grand Trunk petition.

The New England Garment Salesmen Association passed resolutions inviting the Grand Trunk to come to Boston and the members signed the AMERICAN petition.

The Mayor and City Council of Quincy placed their names upon an AMERICAN petition and could not too strongly indorse the movement.

The AMERICAN is in receipt of letters from the secretaries of a score of Massachusetts boards of trades in which they express sympathy with the movement and declared they would ask their organizations to pass resolutions inviting the Grand Trunk to Boston within a few days.

Prominent Men Aid Movement.

Prominent merchants have volunteered to circulate petitions and accounts of office buildings have sent their office force through the white building citing signatures.

The employes of Henry C. Long secured the signatures of nearly every tenant of the Tremont Building.

Joseph L. Clapp, the Bromfield street hatter and furrier, himself secured fifty signatures.

George H. Polley, a prominent book importer, secured as many.

Members of the House of Representatives and the Senate volunteered to carry petitions into every office in the State House and nearly every member of the Legislature has signed the AMERICAN petition.

The Chelsea Board of Trade, 200 strong, passed resolutions at its meeting yesterday indorsing the AMERICAN'S campaign and empowering President A. B. Carberry to provide the members with copies of the petition for signatures.

Here are a few letters of indorsement from Boston business men:

Means More Business.

A. A. Rotenberg, automobile dealer of No. 42 Court street, writes to the Commercial Development Editor as follows:

"The Grand Trunk plan to get into New England, the more certainly there is of a reduction in the taxes. The Canadian railroads need Boston harbor as an outlet and we need the Canadian railroad as an additional stroke to our wheel of progress.

"At the present time there is a question as to who owns the Hub, whether it is the Morgan interests or the people of Massachusetts. This plan of the people will demonstrate who runs the Hub and who will have a right to dictate as to how many extra spokes will be inserted and where.

"The business relation between Canada and New England is merely a reciprocating movement and it is a matter of principle to deal direct, leaving out the middleman's profit—ninety-six miles or 200 miles is too short a distance for any road to consider itself a prominent factor as against a railroad with a mileage of over 7,000 miles. It would be a sad mistake for the State of Massachusetts to allow the Boston & Maine or the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. or the Boston & Albany Railroad to control the movements of the Grand Trunk Railway or the people of Massachusetts."

D. S. Pratt Sees Advantage.

Daniel S. Pratt, the wool importer, writes:

"We believe that the entry of the Grand Trunk to the port of Boston would be greatly to our commercial advantage, and we join in requesting the Grand Trunk to come. We think the time has come for the business men of Boston to get together and sweep away the influences that have so long prevented our development as a seaport, and we thank you for the splendid work you have already performed so far, towards bringing the Grand Trunk to our city. We think that the legislature should pass whatever legislation is necessary to insure deep water docks for the Grand Trunk, and all other proper facilities to bring them here. We are, very truly yours,

"DANIEL S. PRATT & SON.

"Daniel S. Pratt, Sr."

Thanks the American.

H. A. Brood of No. 70 Thetford avenue, Dorchester, writes:

"The Grand Trunk petition is one of the best things you have done yet. Boston needs the Grand Trunk and it is one of the very best roads in New England. Its officers and men are gentlemen and they know how to run a railroad. They are very different from the Boston & Maine, whose officials would do well to know many enemies they can make by their arbitrary and high-handed methods to the public. Success to the Grand Trunk and the upbuilding of Boston's commercial interests."

Louis W. Ewald of No. 10 State street, writes:

"If the Hearst newspapers never did or contemplated ever doing anything else for the people they have earned the everlasting gratitude of every thinking man in New England for putting the Grand Trunk petition within reach of its readers. You gave me the slightest conception of the New York, New Haven & Hartford propaganda. The Boston & Albany had to submit to the domination of the New Haven finance the Buffalo, Rochester & Eastern, which meant another line to Buffalo. By all means get the Grand Trunk to Boston and we doubt not the Hub on the map."

George H. Polley of the firm of George H. Polley & Company, publishers and importers of architectural and industrial art books, writes:

"I enclose a list of names taken on my way to and from my home the past day or two. Everybody is interested and your editorial of yesterday is being read by all. I would be glad to get more signatures, but business calls me out of town for a day or two. As the situation looks now the Grand Trunk is Boston's only salvation."

E. L. Burwell, mill and factory selling agent of Winchester, writes:

"English-Canadian trans-continental system could join hands at Boston for comfortable independence of the would-be dominal railroad influences.

"We have enough of Greeks bearing gifts, yet who plaster the names of minor cities on their trains in the execution of our metropolis, and show their great love for us by lifting our extra mileage coupons.

Sees Union Against Boston.

"The halting of the Grand Trunk by the Mellen interests has been too bold and open to cause longer even the man in the street, and when it comes to a fundamental vote in the Legislature on these vital issues every Senator and Representative will be expected by the people of Massachusetts to register his vote in opposition to railroad monopoly and high-handed outrage policy, or become as dead, politically, as Lorimer."

Attorney Henry C. Long, in an interview with the AMERICAN to-day on the Grand Trunk situation, said:

"The same group of financiers control the whole group of railroads entering New York City and while these interests are distinct while competing with another they are a sound unit against Boston. They will shift business from one to another with perfect freedom in order to get that business into New York City and get it away from Boston. The New York Central controls the lighterage business and in fact has a monopoly of it in the ports of New York as much as the Standard Oil has a monopoly in the United States. Every railroad that enters New York City contributes immensely to the New York Central Company's treasury through the lighterage business.

"No better illustration could be had of the purpose of the New York financiers to crush Boston than the mere fact that the Boston & Albany Railroad, which is one of the finest railroads and best paying pieces of railroad property in the whole world, had been so crippled and deprived of business through the New York Central that it has an annual deficit, one half of which Mr. Mellen is so generously turning into the shoulders of New England, thereby lightening the burden upon the New York Central, in the hope that enough traffic will turn for the establishment by the Grand Trunk Railroad of a terminus at Boston and be to further deprived to the directors of the Grand Trunk railroad.

"As Mayor of the City, I feel it my duty to express my approval of these resolutions and to assure you that the citizens of Boston would welcome the establishment by the Grand Trunk Railroad of a terminus in this city. The entrance of your road into Boston would complete the natural trade route, with a satisfactory outlet from the northwestern provinces to the sea, and the Dominion of Canada would participate in its advantages no less than the City of Boston and the transportation company. I have been glad to further such a mutually profitable arrangement and trust that the plans which are said to be under way may be carried to a successful issue.

Very truly yours,

John F. Fitzgerald

Mayor.

Deals to Aid New York.

"The unthinking city has thrown up their hands when Mr. Mellen announced that he had made a like deal for the Rutland Railroad with the New York Central. It was for the purpose of cutting off commerce headed toward Boston and diverting it to New York. The whole purpose of the New York Central's getting the Rutland and the Boston & Albany was to cut off traffic from Boston and divert it to New York, and since the New Haven is working for the same city the same group of financiers, and wants to get the long haul to New York instead of the short haul to Boston who should it not be easy to make these joint agreements to carry out the same purpose, for they have no other.

"This anybody seen an additional carload of freight brought to Boston since the Rutland deal? Has anybody seen an additional passenger train? The fast train put on from Boston to the West was only a ruse to deceive the public, but the New York Central,

DYNAMITE SUSPECT M'MANIGAL REPEATS EXPLOSION 'CONFESSION'

Three Prisoners Arrested in East for Times Tragedy Now Heavily Guarded in Los Angeles Cells.

LOS ANGELES, April 27.—Ortie E. McManigal, one of the prisoners brought here yesterday, charged with taking part in the Los Angeles dynamiting travesty, reiterated to a staff correspondent of the AMERICAN on board the prisoners' train the confession he is alleged to have made to William J. Burns, of the Burns National Detective Agency, following McManigal's arrest in Detroit, April 11, last. The statement was made in part during the trip from Joliet, Ill., to Los Angeles.

McManigal, with John J. McNamara, secretary of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Association, and his brother, James B. McNamara, are in Los Angeles jail.

They are in separate cells surrounded by extra guards. All three are charged with murder.

Their arrival in irons from Indianapolis and Chicago signalized the beginning of a desperate legal struggle.

It was expected that the three prisoners would be arraigned to-day.

Assistant District Attorney W. J. Ford is en route to this city from Indianapolis bearing evidence which will be used in the prosecution.

The circumstances under which Ford left Indianapolis, where he was arrested on a charge of kidnaping, was not stated by the interested relative to his movements received by District Attorney Fredericks. It is believed that Ford arranged to bring his evidence to Los Angeles and then to return to Indianapolis.

It was while the men were on their way to Los Angeles that McManigal repeated his confession.

Two Others In Plot.

McManigal first stated he was not in Los Angeles before or during the Los Angeles newspaper explosion. He declared that James B. McNamara, who McManigal said was known as J. B. Bryce, was the man that touched off the Los Angeles bomb. He stated that James B. McNamara, working under orders of his brother, John J. McNamara, the secretary of the Iron Workers' Association at Indianapolis.

McManigal declared two other men assisted in the work, but he refused to give their names or say to what extent they assisted.

The prisoner added that James B. McNamara discussed at length the "job" following the explosion. He further said: "It was not the intention to cause the loss of life in this explosion. The clock was set for an hour when James B. McNamara and his accomplices thought no one would be in the building."

$200 for Each "Job."

Continuing his statement, McManigal said:

"I am glad the whole business is over at last. Had I known (turning to Detective McLaren, of the Burns agency, who was sitting opposite McManigal in his stateroom) you were after me I would have walked over to you and given myself up. I was sick of the whole job, and there was nothing in it."

McManigal admitted he was under a salary of $200 for each "job." He stated that while he was idle he received $5 per day.

"Say," McManigal said, turning to the AMERICAN correspondent, "I could have shown you something. I had a book containing dates, location and every job I pulled off."

"No, I haven't got the book now. One of the gang told me one day that I had better 'check' it and I got rid of it."

McManigal, unsolicited, revealed a remarkable knowledge of the powers of nitroglycerine, which he frequently referred to as "soup," describing cans and the like.

Stole Explosive.

His interviewer was trying to seek knowledge as to how he and his accomplices could procure nitro-glycerine in such large quantities.

"That is easy if you know how," the prisoner said.

"Well, how did you do it? Would those in charge sell it to you?"

"Oh, no," said McManigal, "there is always somebody else besides the bosses."

"Well, you mean that some one stole it?"

With a chuckle, he replied, "Well, you can put it that way."

"Say, do you know what 140 quarts of the soup would do if you placed it in that loop district. Well, it would pull every one of these skyscrapers down before you could light a cigarette, and that ain't all. It would make that district look like a prairie. And fulminating caps, why, just let one of those little items explode in your hand. You will have some one out looking for that mitt, and I'll make a book they don't find it."

Facts for a Book.

"Say," said the interviewer. "When I was in Indianapolis last Saturday evening and went out to Jones farm with William J. Burns and looked at the famous plant, now I was given a stick of dynamite to take down town. I carried it around several hours and it gave me a headache."

"That ain't anything," said McManigal. "You ought to have taken a whiff at the can of nitroglycerine out there. Just one smell would have set you crazy and scarred your frame jumping worse than a trip hammer. Why I have got facts that would make the greatest book on the market."

As James B. McNamara entered an automobile to be taken to jail he was seen by Mrs. D. H. Ingersoll, a San Francisco newspaper woman known with whom J. B. Bryce stayed before the Times explosion.

James Mc.-mara, according to detectives, is held as Bryce, the man alleged to have laid the infernal machine that blew up the newspaper plant. Mrs. Ingersoll peered into the face of McNamara as he entered the automobile.

The man was shackled to the officer, but he kept his unbound hand before his face. Despite this, Mrs. Ingersoll said afterward that he was Bryce.

No one, however, could have identified him as Bryce from the printed descriptions sent out after the infernal machine was found by the Grand Jury. Thin and pale, he looked little like the 190-pound man described in the official circulars. Mrs. Ingersoll will again confront him in Jail to-day.

At no time was there evident the least sign of anger on the part of the crowds, or of a disposition to justify the apparent fear of the officers that an attempt might be made to rescue the prisoners. Union buttons were plentiful in the assemblages, but the men wearing them were as quiet and orderly as those who displayed no emblems of affiliation with organized labor.

C. L. U. DENOUNCES METHOD OF ARREST IN DYNAMITE CASE

The following protest was adopted by the executive board of the Boston Central Labor Union at the close of its two days' session:

"Organized labor was horrified, in common with all other decent citizens of the nation, at the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building, with the awful loss of human life and the great damage to property, and we were all hopeful that, should the explosion be shown to have been brought about by deliberate action, the perpetrators, whomsoever they might be, should be apprehended and made to pay the extreme penalty of their cowardly and heinous crime.

"But we indignantly protest against the flagrant and illegal methods pursued by combinations of anti-union employers and private detective agencies, assisted by government officials, in this attempt to fasten the crime upon members of organized labor.

"We hold ourselves and every member of our organizations amenable to the laws of the nation and seek no privileges under, or exemption therefrom, but we demand as impartial and fair an administration of those laws when a member of organized labor is charged with crime as is accorded representatives and members of corporate wealth.

"We denounce the manner in which John J. McNamara was taken from his office, as nothing less than kidnaping.

"We denounce the methods of the National erectors' association and the Burns detective agency in filling the columns of the newspapers of the country with statements designed to lead the men they charge with crime for the purpose of prejudicing the public mind, while they, at the present time, keep the men so charged gagged and away from every avenue of communication, and persistently refuse to say as much as not guilty.

"We approve the action of Governor Marshall of Indiana in surrendering citizens of his State without giving any citizens a chance to be heard in their own behalf, and we call upon Governor Johnson of California to see to it that the same principle of proceeding to all persons charged with crime, and for trial, is maintained.

"We, through our personal knowledge of the character of John J. McNamara, believe him to be incapable of having any connection with the awful crime with which he is charged.

"We respectfully ask our fellow-citizens to follow the example of the press of our city in retaining an open mind and refusing to be prejudiced by ex-parte statements.

"We demand that an impartial trial be guaranteed the accused to the end that the United States may continue to be, as it was intended it should be, a government of laws before which all its citizens are equal."

WHAT IS BEST TRAIT IN WOMAN?

CASH PRIZES IN WOMAN CONTEST

"What is the most excellent trait in woman?"

Write your answer to Eleanor Ames, The AMERICAN, No. 89 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

The best letter wins a cash prize of $10, the next best $5, and there are $1 prizes for the five next best letters.

By ELEANOR AMES.

Everybody in New England appears to be down this week on the question "What is the best trait in a woman?"

Of course there is a vast diversity of opinion, and that only serves to make the debate the more interesting. Almost everybody has a different ideal and the discussion serves to reveal a vast variety of conceptions as to what is to be most sought for in feminine character.

What I want is your opinion. It may have a monetary value. It may be worth $10 to you. But it is worth while to render your views on this most engrossing topic. It will be very interesting to others to learn your opinion of your sex, if a woman, and quite as much so if you are a man. It is gratifying to some that it is a woman's chief aim in life to please the man, and American principle of according to all persons charged with crime, and for trial, is maintained.

"We, through our personal knowledge of the character of John J. McNamara, believe him to be incapable of having any connection with the awful crime with which he is charged.

"We respectfully ask our fellow-citizens to follow the example of the press of our city in retaining an open mind and refusing to be prejudiced by ex-parte statements.

MRS. DODGE ON TRIAL NEXT WEEK

GUILDHALL, Vt., April 27.—Great interest is felt by the people of Vermont in the trial upon the charge of murder of Mrs. Florence M. Dodge, which will begin here on Monday next. The public regard the case as one shrouded in the deepest mystery. Mrs. Dodge is accused of murder in the first degree. She is charged with slaying William Heath, a relative of Dodge, N. H., in her home at Lunenburg on Saturday, September 17, last. The body was found in the Dodge home and had been shot through the heart. He had been working at his trade about the house.

One feature of the case has attracted attention all over the country. There was a disagreement in the jury when the last trial in a woman's case where degree of murder is involved. Usually a person accused of first degree homicide is kept behind bars until set free by a jury which has heard all the evidence and returned a "not guilty" verdict.

But Mrs. Dodge has never been jailed. She has been free on bail ever since the day she was first arrested. There is no precedent to this in New England jurisprudence. Moreover, her bail is regarded by many people in the vicinity of Guildhall, where interest in the case is naturally great, as very small considering the gravity of the charge. Her bail was first fixed at $5,000. Now it is $10,000. This amount Mrs. Dodge can easily command. It is a provision which her astute counsel were quick to take advantage of. It allows the release under bonds of a person accused of murder if the State is unable to show premeditation.

A woman charged with first degree murder in Vermont is, in fact, on parole. This is a State where they hang women. Only one has ever been executed in the history of the State. She was a woman convicted of homicide in the first degree.

SIX MORE FIRE TRAP ACTIONS

Six more suits to compel the installation of proper fire exits were instituted by the city to-day in the Superior Court. PARIS BITTER TOWARD M'VEY

The recent Langford-McVey fight at Paris has stirred up a hornet's nest among French followers of the game. All the boxing clubs at Paris have decided that they will not have any more battles between colored fighters unless a match in which Jack Johnson will be a principal can be arranged.

An idea of how bitter the people have become can be had from the manner in which they treated McVey when he appeared as a spectator at one of the clubs and was hooted out of the place. McVey had to retire from the club in order to avert a riot. McVey enjoyed at one time the greatest following of any fighter in Paris in years.

There will be considerable curiosity to see Redmond perform, as all the new faces at this club in the past month have given perfect satisfaction. Redmond comes here with a reputation won by hard contests with the best light weights in the country. His most noticeable performance was his defeat of Ad Wolgast the light weight champion, in a ten-round bout at Milwaukee six months ago. Redmond had met Wolgast previous to this bout, in a six-round mix-up between after which he [illegible] over all the country that Wolgast refused [illegible]. Three good preliminaries will be staged in addition to the Moore-Redmond contest, which is billed to go twelve rounds.

Cigar Industry of Boston

TO THE PUBLIC:

What New England Quality really means to smokers

It means the finest grade of cigars made under the most sanitary conditions in the world, and that is why some cunning cigar firms in other parts of the country insert the words "New England quality" in their advertisements in order to mislead the public. It would be interesting for some of our public spirited men who are honestly endeavoring to boom New England industries to take a walk through the tobacco district of Boston and see the cigars displayed in the windows of jobbers who supply the retail trade (samples), representing millions of cigars sold in all parts of New England and not one of them made here.

Those same jobbers supply millions of New England made cigars to the retailers only because of the demand for them, which they could not elsewhere are pushed to the limit. A pointer to the smokers: In order to be sure that you are getting the cigar you call for, see that the inside print of the brand is on every cigar and don't accept any other, even if the salesman should try to induce you to make a job lot of your purchase by mixing in inferior cigars made up for that purpose. New England cigars speak for themselves.

There are places in Boston where cigars are sold in large quantities, where the salesmen are coached to misrepresent the conditions under which Boston cigars are made, and it is up to the public upon whom these people are depending for their patronage to put a stop to their methods of injuring an industry that employs thousands of workers and turning millions of dollars annually, all of which is spent right here for living and other expenses.

Business men will realize the importance of our concluding statement, knowing that it is to their advantage to boom New England made cigars.

RED SOX CLIMBING NEARER TO THE TOP

By R. W. LARDNER.

From the dizzy heights of second place the Red Sox are today looking down on all the American League world except the Athletics. The Tigers are still on top of the heap, but a few days may change the set-up three years ago. Brooklyn was in that position and now the Dodgers are the scrub aggregation of baseball. Detroit is not the permanent occupant of the pastime that some people around here seem to think it is. Detroit has received a lot of publicity, but it hasn't been overdone. If you look at the dope from the top you can't find any easy ones. Of course, the Senators are the soft spot on the schedule, but the Red Sox proceeded to forget that fact when they were in Washington, and if they hadn't made such a clean sweep of the series they would have had a hard time getting back to Boston after the Senators had finished with them. It was brilliant, a record that should stand for all time, and the Red Sox deserve credit for it. Taking full advantage of the breaks when they came their way, they won the series by a score of 12 runs to 7. The pitching was not quite as effective as it had been in the previous games, but it was good enough, and the hitting was timely. Hooper, Lewis and Gardner all had a field day, and Harry Hooper, who has been batting around .200 for the last month or so, got a single, a double and a triple in the first game. Duffy Lewis also hit the ball hard, and Gardner was right there with the stick. Desperate Desmond

Desperate Desmond is here seen facing death in two separate and distinct forms. The only question, apparently, is whether the shark will get to him before the rock lands on his coco, or whether vice versa will be the case. Personally, we don't care a hoot which way the cow gets it, so long as he gets it good and hard.

While we are waiting for the grand denouement let us see what is going on beneath the surface of the water. It is well to turn aside from the heroic paths now and then and study the grand and glorious works of Nature. And what creatures more brilliant than kingdom is more hugely impressive than a whale. (pause for a reply).

And, furthermore, what can be more thrilling than a life and death battle between a whale and a school of sharks, aided and abetted by one cross-grained saw-fish? Again we pause, but nobody has doubt you wonder interrupt them, which was on its way to put the vile out of business. Just think what a compliment that is to Claude and himond.

In the moment of the battle, the whale thrashes his tail about with the direct purpose of hitting on one of the sharks, but all the bald dope is to rise above the surface of the water just in time to avoid the saw-fish and then dive down again and avoid the rock that was intended for Desmond hits him and sends him to the bottom. In the mean time, Desperate Desmond is still going up.

With a drowning man's instinct, Desmond grabs hold of the whale's tale as it rises above him and is quickly lifted beyond the reach of the shark. But the shark is out of it, anyhow, for the rock that was intended for Desmond hits him and sends him to the bottom. In the mean time, Desperate Desmond is still going up.

A final flirt of the whale's tale sends the villain flying over the heads of Claude and Desmond, who have been looking over the edge of the cliff to see his finish. While still in middair the cur receives a revolver and exclaims: "Ha! ha! I've got you now." The continuation of this thrilling adventure will be told in to-morrow's picturegs.

A Story of Love and Tragedy by E. Nesbit

He did not see it. Instead he saw what made him doubt whether he were, indeed, seeing anything but some mad, silly dream. There are limits to the things that one can see in the moon light, limits to the things one can do. He struck a match, looked once again, turned from the shrubbery and ran.

You will be surprised to learn that he went back. But that was after he had reached his lodging in the river and had, under a bridge and by the light of the borrowed bicycle lamp, looked at the pocket-book. There were cards in it and the name on those cards was Isadore Sauvage. And there were letters and the handwriting was a girl's, and the name at the end of them was Alexandra Sauvage.

It was in a blinding mist of sick horror that Templar went back to the shrubbery. He could not face the thoughts that came crowding. Not now—no. But at last——

He had loved her——

He would not be the one to hasten the hideous discovery of the truth.

He would not leave its horrible evidences uncovered. The words of Rupert of Hentzau rang in his ears: "I cannot kill where I've kissed—I cannot kill where I've kissed."

He had had a spade, and had his search for the face ended differently, he would never have tried to bury the thing more deeply—to put off the day of just retribution.

For, you observe, it did not then occur to him to doubt that Sandra was responsible for this man's death—that she had either killed him, or directly inspired the killing of him.

That chauffeur—a suspicion that Templar had dismissed as unworthy now—had lied—that Chauffeur Forrest loved her, dared to love her. He was certain of it—she was the spider—and——

He was a strong, burly brute. He could easily have——

It was difficult to cover the thing again—the soil and the leaves were scattered—he had to collect other leaves from the further stretch of the gully; he scratched the soil together and laid it with the leaves—more leaves, more mould—

He trampled the beap firm—laid those leaves over all—and, at last, a little breathless, got away.

The river was waiting for him, lying in its moonlight—the river on which he had first seen her. Templar threw the bicycle in the water again and again. He was——

"My God!" he said, and "My God!" many times. But he would not let himself fall; he had reached the Ambler bungalow by the river's edge. The scene with his bedroom candle in his hand—the bedroom—the face that was——

He sang in his ears as it had done on that night. But he heard a different song.

He sat on the edge of his bed, his elbows on his knees and his head in his hands, and he let the thoughts come. He told himself the tale from the beginning—the tale of this rash adventure in the land of the unknown love—the tale that was all—thus.

He had been a child in a wood. Nothing had happened to him to do with the story. Then he had seen a dance at a theatre, and he had not been what he expected—and had turned up—threatened her—and he had defied him.

Then had come that desolate time of separation. Then the husband had turned up again, and——somehow this had happened. Then she had been free. She had forgiven, that letter saying she was free—put the advertisements in the papers to find him.

He remembered the night when she had come to him—the night when she had danced with the remembrance. All that time she had been in his arms she had known that this thing was lying among dead leaves. She was playing a part as if one part, why not another?

And the innocent allurements that had enraptured and tortured him seem really nothing quite different—the calculated arts of a woman experienced in such scenes? Had he been fooled fooled all through?

"I can't believe it," his heart protested. But his brain insisted on the affirmative answer.

"You see, we hardly knew her at all," said the brain. "She was easily deceived."

"Whatever else done, I love her," said the heart.

"Nonsense," said the brain, "let's get on with the story."

So the brain and heart began again at the beginning and went over everything a second time. And so——till morning——the morning that was Monday.

Mr. Templar shaved and dressed and went to town. He went to that address from which Mrs. Chilvers had written of the pneumonia death—because the heart had suggested the reddish idea that perhaps that thing in the wood was not Sandra's husband at all—but only some one with Sandra's husband's pocketbook in his possession. Why that man himself might be the murderer and the victim might be—oh, any one! Such a man would have a host of enemies.

Thus the heart, hopefully.

The brain said: "Now look!"

Nor was there. There was indeed an Ambler Terrace, and a number 11, but no Mr. Sacrage had ever lodged there. No gentleman at all had ever lodged there. The faded lady who opened the door to him had not come down to letting lodgings. She thanked heavens and her name was not Chilvers, or anything like it.

Templar went home and wrote a letter to Sandra—one he had never posted—the letters he had taken from the pocketbook and to the evening left them with Denny at Dover House.

If you have ever loved a woman whole heartedly, have been on the verge of entering upon marriage with her, and have then turned against her in the most horrible way, that she has died in you and is either a murderess or the inquirer of murder, you will be able to appreciate to a certain extent the conflicting emotions of Mr. Edmund Templar.

If these things happen not to have happened to you, you will not understand or sympathize with his feelings, and no word that you can make you.

But you will understand that No. 64 Corsair street was no longer a place that had been nothing else there was upward evening, the constant straining of his ears to catch the sound of a man's footsteps, the shocking discovery to dread. Arrest of the murderer.

What a horrible thing it was to have happened to a man! You know that it was his own suffering and not hers which, up to now, wholly engrossed him.

"I've been a beast," he said. "I'll get out of London. I can't stand it. And I must get rid of the pocketbook."

A leather pocketbook belonging to a murdered man is a dangerous thing to have in one's possession. Why that man himself might be the murderer and the victim might be—oh, any one! Such a man would have a host of enemies.

Thus the heart, hopefully.

The brain said: "Now look!"

Nor was there. There was indeed an Ambler Terrace, and a number 11, but no Mr. Sacrage had ever lodged there. No gentleman at all had ever lodged there. The faded lady who opened the door to him had not come down to letting lodgings. She thanked heavens and her name was not Chilvers, or anything like it.

He Wanted a Little Variety

By KENNETT HARRIS

By KENNETT HARRIS.

THE storekeeper rejoined the stove circle with a face that was red with suppressed wrath.

"Seems like some folks is a gettin' too big for their britches," he said, with reference to the departed customer. "He allowed that I ought to keep more crisey in the can stuff, an' that raterogers an' head cabbage wasn't his idee of a stock of fresh vegetrubbles."

Solomon Baker nodded.

"Some is that-a-way," he said. "I knowed a feller once't us got tired of hawg an' hominy. Wanted a change, by jucks! 'Gimme the of stand-by.'

"I dunno so much about that," disagreed Washington Hancock. "I like a change myself, once't in a while. A change is good for a feller. You take it when he has to sleep in the same ol' bed, eat the same ol' hen'e'ns, an' do the same ol' chores year in an' year out, an' hang around the same ol' store an' hear the same ol' monologue. I'm up for some sort of hen'e'ns."

"You don't need to," interrupted the storekeeper. "A feller's even often on you they hain't tied fast at this ed."

"You needn't be so dogmoin touchy, Rufe," said Hancock. "I'm just contendin' that a little variety is well right, if it hain't exarried too far. There's some that exarries it too far, mcdeerly. There was a feller in Nodaway, name o' Johnny Tyson, I mister know, 'at was a rigorous varifier cock that-a-way. I reckon you-all won't already believe me, but that feller got tired of his wife.

"She was a right good lookin' gal, too, Mrs. Tyson was, when Johnny married her, an' she didn't lose none of her good looks to speak of. It wasn't that.

"Was Allus Jist So"

"What bored Johnny was that she was allus about jist so. She done her hair up the same way, an made her biscuits with jist about the same shortnin, an' set him if he was a-goin' away without fillin' the wood box and bringin' water from the well, in the same tone of voice, from one week's end to another.

"Then she wore the same pattern calicker dresses, an' the purple merino for Sundays, right along; an' looked mad when she wasn't right well pleased an' smiled over when she was, till Johnny got so's he couldn't skasely stand it.

"She was in the habit of wearin the same face ever' time she sat down to meals with him an' Johnny never thinks 'My land! Hain't I got to look at that three times a day until death do us part? Hain't there nothin' else that I kin love an' cherish, in sickness an' health for a spell, by way of a change?'

"Well, when a feller gets to wonderin that, an' he's like that, his thinkin hain't right agreeable outside of the fambly. It is in-a-dish-on a dewy an inhabited island, without women folks on it, he ain't long in findin' out that there is someone.

"There was a widder lady visitin Henry Weatherman's folks from Reddin—settin' grass or sod, I disremember which—an' she an' Johnny struck up quite a acquaintance. I ain't a-sayin' that there was anythin out of the way about it.

"She claimed that Johnny wasn't nothin' but a dear friend to her—acted like Rufe here is to me—an' Johnny he claimed that she wasn't nothin' but a dear friend to him —same as Uncle Levi here might be—an' old Man Somerindyk granted at the silvers.

"The partickler thing about her that Johnny liked was that she never raved or bit what she'd say or do the next minute. She was one o' these here calm, feminine kine of flighty an' nottional, an' she'd have more changes in a day than Johnny will have in a month.

"She'd have laughin' spells, an' sober spells, an' religious streaks, an' devilish streaks; an' she'd wear her hair smoothed down an' frizzed on her forrid in a sin-bunnit or a ten-dollar mess of fuss an' feathers an' leghorn straw, jist as the notion took her.

"Widder" Kept Him Guessing

Sometimes she'd make Johnny think he was a dear friend, sure-enough; an' other times she'd let on that his room was a right smart better than his comp'ny, to be taste.

"That was what Johnny called a woman. He'd get so he could look at his wife an' tell what she was a-goin' to say, minutes out of four; an he could set his watch by the things that she done.

"One day he got confidential with a feller that he knowed he could trust to keep his mouth shet, an' he mentioned how he found it was his wife-pizzle 'Sh-h-h! Very soon on the metaphin, with one finger, while she sung 'Jordan's Stormy Banks' an' he stood with one foot on the tidy rug.

"What is Sam Hill are you a-doin'?' he hollers.

"She didn't pay no attention to him, which was a considerable out of the ordinary; so he takes her by the shoulder an' shakes her. She didn't pay no attention to that, but she ups with a yawse of black-eyed beans that stood on the table an' smashes it all over his bald.

"Then she bust out a-laffin' an' went hep, skip an' jump out into the kitchen an' began to set the dishes for supper. After a while Johnny comes in, aidgin' sideways, an' with his eye sorter beggin' out, an' asts her if she wasn't a-feelin' right well.

"Fine as a Fiddle," She Says

"'Fine as a fiddle,' says his wife, 'Fine as forty fiddles an' a blue-eyed June-bug. How's yourself, Johnny jump-up? Set up an' have some of this nice sauerkraut pie I've done baked for your supper.'

"'Sauer-kraut pie!' says Johnny.

"'Jist for a change,' says she. 'I reckon you hain't ever had some lately. There's a lovely meriasses gravy an' custard beans, too, that you might try.'

"'You'd have to keep the flies off yourse'f while I go out an' practice walkin' on the stilts in the yard. They say it's good for the complexion.'

"Well, Johnny didn't lose no time. He run out to the barn an' jumped on a horse without takin' time to saddle an' rid over to the nearest neighbor's an' tol' 'em that his wife had gone plum loony," but when they got to the house Mrs. Tyson was a-settin' darnin' socks as reasonable an' sensible as the next one.

"All is, Johnny's been a kickin' about the meals bein' too much alike, she says, so I thought I'd try an' give him a little variety. As for the music, they say it has charms to smooth the savage beast, so I allowed I'd try that, too. Don't you-all worry about me.'

So the neighbors went off a-laffin' an' Johnny stood with his mouth open, while they went, lookin' like a hen with the gapes.

"The next mornin' he was woke up at about 5 o'clock by a orful to-do in the kitchen, when he got his eyes open, he seen his wife trim his overalls on standin' by the boddide. I want you to git up an' cook breakfast this mornin' for a change,' says she. 'I'm a-goin out to do the chores, now, an' I want to find the grub ready against I get back.'

He Got Variety Enough

"Johnny got up all right, but he wasn't quick enough, an' by the time he got out in his Sunday clo'es to the barn she'd got the milkin' half done. He didn't say nothin', for he idee a gas for her, an' she stepped back an' scooed him with a pail of milk an' then chased him back to the house with a pitchfork.

"From that time out, Johnny can't say he's had enough for any one man.

"Mrs. Tyson learned more ways of keepin' him gressin' than the widder lady from Sedalia ever dreamed of—from paintin' her face green an' purple to tyrolin hand-springs. Inside of a month Johnny would have given his next cuss-dawg for a day when there wouldn't nothin' happen that he wasn't a-lookin' for.'

"Did he ever get it?" asked the storekeeper.

"No," answered Hancock. "When she done let up on him he was always expectin' her to break out again."

Their Last Evening Together Before Helen Starts on Her Visit

"DON'T you want to put this in?" holding up a tiny white pique coat.

Helen, who was on her knees before her half-packed trunk, looked up wearily.

"Why, mother, do you think Winifred will need that? You know I am taking the one with the embroidered collar."

"But this is lighter, and it will soon be very warm out home."

"Very well; just lay it there. I'll put it in this tray."

It was almost five now; Helen had been packing all day. To-morrow would be Wednesday, the day they had planned to start. Her mother's trunk was already packed, but Helen still had much to do.

It was hard to get both herself and the baby ready for a visit, even though the visit was to her mother's home. It was hard to decide what to take, just what they would need—especially as she did not know how long she would stay.

Winifred's gruff "Stay as long as you want" had determined her to stay longer than the two weeks she had first planned. Was his attitude of indifference about this trip an unusual one? Or did he really care? Helen was constantly asking herself this.

She longed for some sign of concern on his part; but he was coolly disinterested. It was true he had spent more time with the baby the last few days, but to Helen, herself, he had seemed even more indifferent than usual.

Keeping Back the Tears

And this last day, as Helen put away his laundry and straightened out his clothes-closet, so that all his things might be in order when she left, there was a lump in her throat and the tears were hard to keep back.

She knew she did not want to go. She knew, already, that every hour she would be away from him would be an hour of longing to return. Already she anticipated her heart-aching homesickness. And yet she had gone too far in her preparation to give up the trip now.

This would be their last evening together, and she looked forward to his homecoming with painful eagerness. Surely, there would be some tenderness in his attitude toward her to-night.

It was after all when he came. She heard him speak to her mother in the hall, but she did not go out to meet him. She would wait until he came in to her.

She was still kneeling by the trunk, and with trembling fingers rearranging some things in the tray, when he came to her door.

"Hello there! Almost packed?"

She nodded. "Almost. I've only a few more of the baby's things to put in now."

If he would only come over and kiss her! If he would only say something to show her that he would be lonely while she was gone! She heard Winifred coo as he took her up.

"How's my babykins? Me—so, you mustn't put everything in your mother's My, what a greedy little kitten!"

Helen bowed her head on the trunk. He had love for the baby, but not for her.

He played with Winifred for several moments and then went to his own room to freshen up for dinner. Helen, beating back a sob, followed him. He was standing before his dresser in his shirt sleeves. His head turned back, buttoning his collar. His strong, well-knit body never showed to better advantage.

It was characteristic of him that he did not notice when she entered. Helen watched him in silence as he selected a tie and adjusted it carefully. He pulled up his suspenders, and finally turned around with an inquiring—

"Well?"

"I wanted to show you about your things, dear, so you will know where they are when I am gone. Here, I've put a few of your summer shirts in this drawer. You'll probably need them in a week or so. The rest are here," opening his closet "on this shelf. When you're through with your Winter shirts you can put these in the drawer where they will be easier to get at. And your low shoes are here on this shelf. I wanted to put that heavy overcoat away, it takes up so much room. But I was afraid there might be a few cold days yet."

"Nonsense, not this late. I'll not want that again."

"Then I'll put it away in camphor before I go. And here's your panama in this box. You will have to have it cleaned and pressed. And here," going back to the chiffonier, "here are your Sunday collars. Now I think that's all. You know where everything else is by this."

"All right," indifferently going over to the dresser again and slipping on his vest and coat.

Helen was standing uncertainly by the door.

"Warren!"

"Well?"

She came to him timidly and rested her head against his arm.

"Warren!"

"Well, what is it?"

"Nothing, only you—you know I'm going away to-morrow."

"Well, what of that? You want to go, don't you?"

"Oh, yes; only——"

"Only what?"

Silence.

"Well, what on earth are you sniffling about——"

"Nothing," ——ning away, her face still averted. "Are you ready for dinner? I think Delia is putting it on the table now."

DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE HEART

Fatty Degeneration of the Heart may well be a bugbear to all fat people. An accessoffat around the heart noiselympedesits movements, but gradually changes thesubstanceof the organ. The pulse becomes weaker; excitement or extra exertion causes throbbing in throat and temples; the breath is short and gaspy. When these symptoms come to the man or woman who is too fat, steps should be taken to remove the excess fat, not only from the suffocated heart, but from other parts of the body where it makes its unwelcome appearance. Many so-called fat reducers are dangerous to the fatty heart, placing upon it an added burden by stimulating its action. There is but one sure, harmless fat reducer known, the new famous Marmola Prescription of a Detroit physician, and its more convenient form, Marmola Prescription Tablets. By means of these harmless little tablets, thousands of overfat people have surely and safely reduced their weight at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day without exercise or dieting.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists, or the Marmola Company, 71 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c for a large case.

R&G CORSETS

Foreigners invariably remark on the superior figure and grace of American women as compared with European.

Grace of figure being a matter of corseting we know from the millions annually sold of R & G Corsets that they have much to do with this impression.

NEWS OF PLAYS AND PLAYERS

It begins to look as if John Craig, in order to maintain his Spring program, would have to terminate the engagement of "The End of the Bridge" with next week's performance. The success of Florence Lincoln's play has been one of the most astonishing stock events of several seasons, and if it were not for plans that had already been completed before the production of "The End of the Bridge" Mr. Craig would have no difficulty in continuing the play to the end of his season. Mr. Craig announced, however, that next week will be the last of the interesting play.

* * *

There will be but four more performances of "The Matinee Idol" at the Shubert Theatre, where De Wolf Hopper has shown himself competent to play straight parts as well as grotesque roles in old-fashioned comic opera.

* * *

Viola Fortescue of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," is the daughter of Viola K. Fortescue, the ponderous Catherine of Rice's "Evangeline," and it was quite natural that his daughter, growing up to stage life, should appear in the same production, making it one of her first successes.

* * *

Lillian Thurgate of "The Commuters" and Allison Skipworth, who was seen here recently with Ruth Chatterton, are both the most prominent of all the London girls who have crossed the Atlantic in musical comedy, and remained to take up dramatic playing in the legitimate drama.

* * *

Jack Sheehan, who plays a young drummer from Atlanta in "Ann Boyd," who comes to the Shubert next Monday, completed a three years' service as a page, just before joining Miss Lucille LaVerne's company. During that time he had been an Oriental with Nat Goodwin and William Collier, and with present management methods it seemed as if he was doomed to remain a "Jap" to the end of his theatrical days. He confessed that he was not only happy when the chance was given him to join the rest of "Ann Boyd."

* * *

The revival of "The Prince of Pilsen" is bringing its own reward to Henry W. Savage. The engagement of this joyous musical comedy at the Majestic Theatre is proving one of the most popular of the season.

* * *

The new attractions announced at the theatres for next week are Lucille LaVerne in "Ann Boyd," at the Shubert; Montgomery and Stone in "The Old Town" at the Boston; "The Parish Priest" at the Grand Opera House, and La Reboux at the Adams Opera Company at the Boston Opera House.

DISPLEASED AT CARD, BUYS ENTIRE LOT

PITTSFIELD, April 27.—Mrs. John Swan reported to be worth over $3,000,000, made a purchase of postcard pictures of her Summer home, the large brick mansion in Stockbridge, which recently caused E. A. Benjamin, proprietor of a souvenir store, to faint. Mrs. Swan, whose Winter home upon Fifth Avenue, New York, was looking over cards, when she saw one of her residence, but asked how many of them he had. Benjamin replied he had 10,000, a souvenir supply. Mrs. Swan wrote out a check for $50 and carried the cards away.

MASSACHUSETTS DAY AT PAGEANT

The Daughters of the Revolution of Massachusetts give a reception to the missionaries to-day on the midway platform of the World in Boston at the Mechanics Building. The members of the Daughters of the Revolution occupy the platform. State Regent Mrs. Susan Moulton Dunsmoor presides and the address of welcome is by the Rev. F. P. Haggard, chairman of the board of trustees of the World in Boston. Mrs. May Wright Sewall, Mrs. Albert Kimball and Mrs. Ina Steward Wordsworth respond. The Carnegie peace hymn is sung by Mrs. Charles P. Cockrell, during which Miss Bertie Shipley unfurls the rainbow flag of peace. During the exercises the American flag, the star spangled banner bordered with white, is unfurled by the members of the organization present.

The doors of the exposition were thrown open shortly after noon. This being Massachusetts Day more attention was paid to the home missionary work. The address of welcome was by Rev. Samuel B. Capen, president of the World in Boston, with a response by Governor Foss for the Commonwealth.

From 5:40 to 6, the Rev. Lucien C. Warner will give the popular fifteen minute address, and from 8:20 to 8:40, Rev. Alpha G. Kynett will address the people on the "Strategic Opportunity of American Christianity." At the dinner of the Inter-denominational Layman's Missionary Movement the longest hall from 6:30 to 7:30. Rev. James L. Barton, and H. F. LaFlamme will be the speakers.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS
STOCKS SHOW SLIGHT GAINS

NEW YORK, April 27.—Canadian Pacific was the strongest feature of the list at the opening of the stock market to-day. An advance of almost one point was scored in Canadian Pacific, but in some quarters this strength was regarded as the consequence of manipulation.

The opening was only moderately active. Fractional gains were shown in Reading and Lehigh Valley. Wall Street early in the session inclined to a rumor that a powerful financial interest had taken over a big line of Reading, thus technically strengthening the position of that issue. There was also substantial activity in U. S. Steel at 74, which was approximately 1/8 above last night's closing price.

Much of the trading appeared to be of a professional nature, but belief was expressed that the recent Supreme Court did not hand down its decisions in the anti-trust cases on Monday I bull movement would follow.

General business was also strong, opening up a point. Among the railroads gains were as follows: Great Northern preferred 3/8, Missouri Pacific 3/8, Northern Pacific 3/8, Atchison 3/8, Soo 3/8 and southern Pacific 1/4.

The curb Market opened moderately active and firm. Americans were strong in the London market, the premium on which being broader than any other the trading in American issues here for some time.

High grade brokers believe that the bond market will become more important every day from now on, and finally cause activity in the stock market. They do not expect interest to revive in a large way in stocks until the bargains in bonds are taken up.

$ $ $

The deadlock has been broken in the iron ore trade by a reduction of 50 cents a ton and the case with the railroads are disposing of short-term notes and bonds promises to supply needed funds. The long-delayed buying of steel by the railroad companies, if this is once begun in earnest, should be a stampede in business and in the stock market.

$ $ $

Circumstances in connection with the dealings in U. S. Steel on several occasions in recent weeks, seem to confirm the theory that the mysterious articles being made on Steel are directed from the dark pool and that is in position to have official knowledge of the business of the trust, and who, therefore, knows how to make his movements effective. In addition to this selling, which might be called non-official, and which does not originate in any of the Morgan offices, a great deal of ordinary dividend selling of Steel in London following the report on Tuesday that the unfavorable article being made by the Steel Corporation would not "shield the umbrella" over the iron market. This return to sound business methods now seen in the Amalgamated Copper, for a management capable of such a wonderful reform may also be capable of producing copper at such a figure as to compete with the low cost producers. The importance of this new move in regard to the method of selling copper can hardly be overestimated.

$ $ $

Some covering is taking place in Virginia-Carolina Chemical and American Cotton Oil stocks, and it can be stated on the highest possible authority that the Virginia-Carolina had such a good year that it is almost certain dividends will be resumed. Insiders are advising their friends not to sell their holdings of the stock. It is an instance, however, where the governors of the New York Stock Exchange are neglecting their duty by permitting the machinery of the exchange to be used in making a market for the stock of a company which fails to make adequate reports of its earnings. The company made no attempt to deceive the public regarding including the Southern Cotton Oil earnings in its report of business done, for the fact was clearly stated in the annual report. But millions are lost by the public by reason of the fact that insiders have superior knowledge of the earnings of companies that report only once a year.

$ $ $

George M. Rice of Worcester has been added to the board of the Boston Bear Mining Company. This company's plans this year include the installing of an air drilling system, building of tramways from the company's mines to its concentrating mill, and the use of motor trucks for the transportation of its ores to railroad during the open seasons.

$ $ $

The annual report of the Tonopah Belmont Development Company will give an estimation of 445,353 tons of proved and probable ore, of an average gross value of approximately $35 or a total of $15,516,850 gross in sight.

PLAN SPRING AUTO OUTING
STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

By J. C. KERRISON.

Plans for the Spring outing of the Bay State Automobile Association will be announced in a very few days, the president E. A. Gilmore and Chairman W. H. Stevens, of the touring committee, made a trip along the South Shore on Sunday, visiting several places that they had under consideration for this outing on June 17 and 18.

The outing, this year, will be held at the Sippewissett in Falmouth, where extensive arrangements have been made by the touring committee for the reception and entertainment of the members.

Many of the members will drive down to Falmouth on the afternoon and evening of the 16th, being on hand early Saturday morning of the 17th. Others will leave Boston that morning, going over the road and arriving there in season for lunch and to witness the ball game between the Cape Cod League Champions single and married men. In the afternoon will be the golf tournament.

On Sunday, the club will tour to a nearby grove and enjoy the usual clambake and an old-fashioned picnic.

The outing is for the members, their families and friends. The committee in charge having made up its mind to make the outing the one big event of the early Spring.

* * *

Manager Lawton, of the local branch of the Ford Motor Co., has started for the home office in Syracuse just evening. Mr. Lawton goes to see if he can secure an additional allotment of Franklin cars and trucks, the season having been a successful one.

* * *

George Robertson, the famous driver, who recently retired from the race track, will be in charge of the Indianapolis tournament and act as the assistant starter; Robertson's duties will be similar to those in racing game, and it is a two to one shot that before the termination of the entries he will change his mind and drive a car in the race.

* * *

The latest addition to the field of entries for the Indianapolis Speedway event include Caleb Bragg with a Fiat, Ralph Beardsley in a Simplex, Hugh Hughes and Charles H. Bigelow with Mercers.

* * *

The Speedway management plans to start the first of the big events at exactly 10:30 o'clock on the morning of the race, allowing the throng to get into place. Miles will be run after 10 o'clock. Miles and police will cover the entire grounds.

CALLED TO BELFAST.

BELFAST, Me., April 27.—Rev. Arthur H. Bliss of the First Congregational Church of Caribou has accepted a call to the First Universalist church of Belfast, the pastorate to open in June.

JACKOLA LOSES MRS. BELMONT

NEW YORK, April 27.—It was a cold-hearted private secretary that threw the fiery darts of interference on the eve of affection kindled in the heart of Dr. John Jackola, the Finnish advocate of woman suffrage by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, head of the society suffragists in America.

That's what Dr. Jackola intimated after he had been discharged by a police magistrate at Mrs. Belmont's request on his promise not to annoy her again by his ardent courtship.

Dr. Jackola talked freely after the trial. He has been talking freely ever since he met Mrs. Belmont on board a liner on an trip to this country. He afterward met her in the suffrage cause and James McManon, private secretary to Mrs. Belmont, says her delight at Dr. Jackola's work for the cause was evidently mutual by the door of a most personal feeling. Suddenly boxes of roses and notes filled with the fervency of a love-sick swain for the recipient was addressed as "My Divine Goddess," "Queen of America," "The Minerva of American Womanhood" and the "Guidance of Fate" by which name Mrs. Belmont. She was annoyed. So was Private Secretary McMahon, whose duty it was to open and read the notes. He intimates that many of them were "mushy." Dr. Jackola will go on speaking for woman suffrage but the glow of his ardor will be pleasantly diminished, after the court proceedings he remarked:

"I believe all this would not have happened if the notes I sent Mrs. Belmont had not been opened first by a secretary."

Patrons of the Rathskeller will be interested to know that Mr. Moriste has been placed in charge as head waiter. Mr. Moriste's ability will be pleasantly recalled by many who have experienced his skill and tact during the past seven years, and all who dine here will profit by the addition in the future.

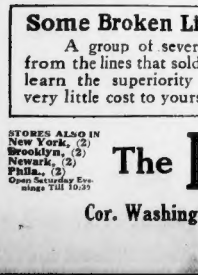
HILTON'S

In every community there is ONE store that is ahead of ALL OTHERS of its kind.

Why?

Not because it is lucky, but because it has learned to do the RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME. The same qualities win in every walk of life.

We are struck to the heart with a desire to have you know the strength and depth of our methods—why our clothes are the finest ready-for-service garments in the world—why the values we give are unapproached by any other house in this city—why we are FOREMOST in our line in this city today. Will you come?



Some Broken Lines of $22.50 & $25 Suits at $15
A group of several hundred Spring Suits from the lines that sold the quickest. A chance to learn the superiority of HILTON Clothes at very little cost to yourself.

For Cowardly Dynamite Murderers Hanging Is "Too Good." Nobody Denies That

But What About the Bolder, Shameless Killers That Hide Behind the Name of a Corporation and Kill in the Open Streets?

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

The country is shocked by the revelations, accusations, alleged confessions, and general atrocity in connection with recent destruction of life and property by dynamite.

In Los Angeles, California, a newspaper office was destroyed, twenty-one human beings were killed—there is no question whatever that this dynamite outrage and many others were based upon private vengeance and hatred.

The manager of a detective agency announces now that he has caught the criminals, or some of them. He declares that he has in his possession evidence which reveals the details of criminal enterprises that have destroyed more than one hundred and twenty lives and millions of dollars' worth of property.

Some of those accused are arrested; they are on their way to trial. Others will be arrested.

It is one of the most infamous and revolting chapters in the whole history of America.

Concerning every individual accused or suspected, sentence and judgment will, of course, be suspended until trial and conviction or acquittal.

But that the crimes WERE committed, there is no doubt whatever.

That men did unite and conspire by the use of dynamite to avenge wrongs real or imaginary, destroy innocent human lives, recklessly and remorselessly, there can be no question.

No one denies that men guilty of such crimes should be punished to the utmost of the law.

Mere hanging of such vile creatures, which is all that the law can do, seems totally inadequate.

These men's lives would not for a moment be safe, in any ordinary crowd, if their guilt were once established. Everybody would look with horror upon the man guilty of secret murder, willing for the sake of increased earnings or private revenge to kill those that are innocent and with whom there is no quarrel.

There are no words strong enough to express the public detestation of any man guilty of the shameful and cowardly dynamite killings. No one but a criminal and murderer at heart would speak a word in defence of such monsters. The only wish concerning them is that they should be put out of the way or out of the world with the least possible delay.

Let us, however, remember that murder is murder, and death is death—however inflicted. And while we abate in no way our horror of the sensational murderer who works with dynamite in secret, let us not forget the character nor postpone, if we can help it, the just punishment, of those that kill publicly and defiantly.

The dynamite murderers, the secret, hidden assassins, mysterious and cowardly, are the most impressive, the most atrocious to the mind, because they are unusual.

But those secret murderers that work with dynamite are by no means as dangerous, by no means as harmful to the community in the long run, as the bigger and more powerful class of killers.

We refer to those men that hide behind the power of money, behind the names of corporations, that do their killing on a big scale, not for revenge, not in the heat of passion, but coldly and deliberately for profit.

The dynamite murderers are vile beyond words, infinitely worse than those Camorrists of Italy now on trial.

Just as vile, though more respectable, is the killer hidden and protected by the corporate name and corporate wealth.

We know how to deal with men that kill by dynamite. Once they are identified, caught and tried, their punishment is swift. The man who kills with dynamite, once detected, KILLS NO MORE.

This cannot, unfortunately, be said of the corporation killers. It cannot be said of those that destroy the lives of children in mills and factories. It cannot be said of those that kill with adulterated foods, or those that kill more slowly but just as effectively by forcing up prices and causing lack of food.

Above all, the criminal bold and defiant, most daring of those that kill openly in America, is a certain corporation called the New York Central Railroad.

This concern doesn't work with dynamite, and it doesn't work secretly. But it has already killed more men, women and children in one single street than have been killed by all the dynamiters in the United States.

In that street in one city—Death Avenue, so called in New York City—this corporation in the light of day has killed and sent into the grave 352 HUMAN BEINGS.

What shall be said of THAT kind of murder? Remember that those killings ARE MURDER, and nothing else.

This newspaper earnestly hopes that every man guilty of the dynamite outrages will be convicted and punished to the limit of the law.

We hope also that the men guilty of killing in public streets, men that go to Europe after a successful killing season, will in time also be made to feel that killing is not safe—not even killing on a wholesale financial eminently respectable corporation basis.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

Editor AMERICAN:

I noticed an answer you made recently to a correspondent who suggested you cease writing on some of the shortfalls that seem to be agitating the public mind. I do not agree with the correspondent.

The referendum, direct election of United States Senators, income tax, etc., are matters that make for popular government, yet I wonder if even those laws if passed would accomplish much? With man's cupidity and necessities always a flaw in the armor of the people, under our present conditions, can you hope for improvement? Frankly, I think not.

The system is all wrong and, in my belief, no matter how drastic the temporary effect of destroying the system, until that system is replaced by a condition where the people come into their own, all your other laws are mere palliatives. Poverty is the main source of crime, and until poverty is eliminated, the great fortunes checked and the people are given an opportunity to take their place on a more equitable basis, the disease will exist. The sun seems to be rising slowly, but it will never shine with noonday brightness until equality is made possible in equal opportunity and the destruction of the present system, with its terrors of fear and living misery to the masses.

I. RUSSELL.

PRAISES EDITORIALS

Editor AMERICAN:

Your editorial in to-day's AMERICAN is a "corker." I have often thought that if everyone who really appreciates the AMERICAN editorials were to write and say so, you would need two or three extra men on your staff to open and read the correspondence. There are no class of thinkers exempt from your writings; as one follows daily your editorials one can find many things which, if taken in the spirit in which they are meant, are equally beneficial to people of all creeds. Your editorial Sunday was fine, and the editorial of last Wednesday was the best for years; that "Sacred Pack Idea" ought to make some people sit up and think. Hoping to see more along the scientific line I am

He Has to See the Game, Money or No Money

The Governor Is Steadfast

Governor Foss has signed the measure which takes one long step toward the restoration to the citizen of that protection to his liberty and property which, above all others, is the best and most cherished—the right of a trial by jury in all cases when charged with acts that threaten his liberty.

How utterly vain was the organized campaign by corporation lawyers and their clients to hurry the Governor into vetoing this bill is apparent from the language which Governor Foss used when he signed the bill. It is worth quoting here:

> THIS BILL AIMS TO REMEDY A JUST GRIEVANCE, AND IN PART FULFILLS THE PLEDGES OF THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM. IT IS IMPERFECT IN THAT IT GIVES A REMEDY ONLY IN CASES OF THE COMMISSION OF ACTS THAT ARE PRIMA-FACIE CRIMINAL. THIS IS DUE, IN MY OPINION, TO THE FACT THAT ONLY IN THIS FORM COULD ANY MEASURE OF RELIEF BE ENACTED THIS YEAR, AND FOR IT THE OPPONENTS OF REMEDIAL LEGISLATION ARE PRIMARILY RESPONSIBLE. I BELIEVE THAT WITH THIS LAW ON THE STATUTE BOOK IT WILL BE POSSIBLE HEREAFTER TO SECURE LEGISLATION PERFECTING THE REMEDIES THIS BILL IMPERFECTLY SUPPLIES; WHILE WITHOUT SUCH A LAW PROPOSED REMEDIES ARE LIKELY TO BE AS DIFFICULT TO OBTAIN HEREAFTER AS IN THE PAST. I, THEREFORE, SIGNED THIS BILL AS A PARTIAL FULFILMENT OF PLATFORM PLEDGES AND THE BEST PRACTICABLE BASIS FOR FUTURE PROGRESSIVE LEGISLATION.

Opponents of this bill besieged the Governor by day and by night, worrying him with every imaginable technical objection to the bill. But, although these objections disturbed him, until investigation proved them to be groundless, yet on the merits of the bill he never wavered.

At times, judged by the especial efforts which the representatives of organized labor at the State House made in behalf of other bills, it has seemed that even the working men themselves did not appreciate the grave importance to their liberties and welfare of legislation like that which the Governor has just signed. But thoughtful men know that there is no more critical matter in the whole docket of labor grievances than this power claimed by the courts to prohibit, to find guilty and to punish men for wrong doing without a trial by jury.

The character of the opposition developed to this bill marked the importance which those who profited by the exercises of this usurped power attached to it.

In recommending this legislation in his inaugural message, and in signing it against the opposition of the most powerful interests, Governor Foss deserves the appreciation of all classes, and of the working men in particular, against whom this dangerous judicial power was exercised.

Robert Luce for Income Tax to Make Rich Pay Just Share

By ROBERT LUCE

President Taft in a carefully prepared speech at Denver, September 21, 1909, devoted entirely to federal taxation, based his request for the income tax amendment chiefly on his wish to get contribution toward the expenses of government from bondholders. It is not generally known that only an insignificant amount of tax is paid in respect to bonds, which represent thousands of millions of dollars of the wealth of the country. So far as these bonds represent intangible property—good-will, franchises, etc.—they virtually escape taxation. For the most part they are left to local assessment, which does not in practice reach them.

Mr. Taft recalled that in his letter of acceptance of the nomination for the Presidency, he had said he thought an income tax could be devised which would conform to the constitution, and that upon his election he directed the Attorney-General to prepare such a law. The result was the corporation tax, which the President holds to be a tax on the income of stockholders. But it does not reach bondholders. This was prevented by the constitution. He wants the constitution changed so that he can also get contribution from bondholders.

If the amendment passes, he said at Denver, "it will be possible to add to our corporation tax the feature of imposing a tax on the bonded interest of that corporation by a percentage tax upon interest to be paid, thus reducing the amount of interest which the corporation would pay to the bondholders to the extent of the tax collected. This would make the corporation tax a more beneficial measure, and one reaching interests that ought to be reached, because, under modern systems of financing corporations, the bondholders and stockholders are all of them, in a sense, joint investors, and a corporation income tax ought to include them all."

Whether by reason of this argument of the President or for other reasons, nearly all the Massachusetts delegation in Congress supported the income tax amendment. With them and with the President I agree, believing the argument to be sound and overshadowing in importance.

As to the taxing of bondholders, it is urged as it was in the matter of taxing stockholders through the national corporation tax, that this is a source of revenue that ought to be left to the States. As a matter of fact the Massachusetts Legislature has during the last generation repeatedly refused to pass bills looking to contribution from the owners of this variety of wealth. Our own corporation tax reaches the stockholders, at the fountain head, the tax payment being made by the corporation itself, in behalf of the stockholders, by so much reducing their dividends. But no attempt is made so to reach bondholders, whose percentage of interest suffers no diminution whatever by reason of the existence and expense of government, with all it means by way of protection to the property concerned.

Nearly half the value of the public-service corporations of Massachusetts, enormous as it is, makes no sacrifice for the public welfare, except as by accident bonds are caught when estates are passing through the probate court, or as they may be part of the wealth of men who are doomed and pay a tax in the lump, or as they are among the holdings of savings banks and other institutions that pay at a reduced rate. We do not even pretend to try to get income from those holders of the bonds of Massachusetts corporations who live outside the State, and the property represented thereby escapes altogether.

Some of the other objections to the amendment are trivial, some are absurd. Remember that the amendment simply proposes to restore to Congress a power it supposed it had for more than a hundred years, until the Supreme Court denied it. During that century and more this power was never abused, nobody dreamed of the injustice now predicted, nobody attempted it. The suggestion that by taxing State or municipal bonds Congress might drive a State into bankruptcy or out of existence, is preposterous. The suggestion that the poorer States would try to milk the richer States is equally foolish. The fact is, of course, that if the richer States do not pay their fair share of the cost of running the government, the poorer States must pay more than their share. That, however, is often forgotten in discussing taxes.

Somebody must pay. If you don't pay what you ought, somebody else must pay more than he ought. There is no reasonable probability that a scheme of taxation can be devised by which the poorer States or the poorer individuals will pay less than they ought. It is always the richer who pay less than they ought, in proportion to the capacity to make sacrifice. That is the evil of every system of taxation in use in the United States or any part thereof to-day. Always the heavier burden is on the weaker shoulders. Such use as in all human probability would be made of an income tax by Congress would somewhat militate against this evil.

Abraham and Abraham

In Commemoration of the Lincoln Penny.

(We gladly print the following poem, contributed by John D. Wuesbaum, lawyer, of No. 76 Rivington street New York City):

In the dim and distant shadows
Of primeval centuries,
Way back in the golden era,
Days of ancient memories,
Trod with certain steps a wand'rer—
Abraham, we call by name—
To the far-off land of promise,
Even unto world-wide fame!

Abraham, of recent memory;
Lincoln, man of yesterday;
Simple woodsman, poor, unlettered—
Angel, demi-god to-day!
Thee we worship as the father
Of a new and free-born race;
On the millions of our pennies
Cherish we thy bronzed face!
